Put an Apartment Building on your Vacant Lot and You'll have a Paying Investment

THOUSANDS of people in Chicago have owned a vacant lot for years that has brought them no returns but loss of interest on money invested and annual taxes. This Spring, with 20,000 to 25,000 families looking for a place to live, they have an unprecedented opportunity to turn that lot into a paying investment by building a two-story or three-story apartment on it. They can then sell it or move into it themselves and rent the balance.

A Sound Business Proposition

Experienced builders will tell you that it takes no more foundation and roof for a two-apartment or three-apartment building than for an ordinary dwelling. Your costs are not doubled or trebled and your tenants help you pay interest and taxes. By paying rent to yourself you can apply it clear against your loan. Figure it out and you'll be surprised to find how easy it is to own a substantial piece of revenue-bringing property in this way.

Easily Financed

There are Chicago builders who will put up such an apartment for you for a payment down of only 10% or 15%. Building and Loan Associations and Banks will loan approximately 60% of the value of your building. Before you build, take your architect or contractor with you to consult your Local Lumber Dealer. He's an expert in woods, and well qualified to advise you on the most adaptable lumber for your building purposes.
