Clubs in This Vicinity Take Action to Increase the Fee for Joining Clubs

Close on the footsteps of the high cost of living follows another cause of worry. The already high cost of golfing is going even higher. Actuated by the increased cost of maintaining the links, and membership a trifle too large for the good of the course, several golf clubs are raising their initial membership fee. The golf enthusiast now faces an outlay in membership cards and equipment approaching $1,000 for the first year and an upkeep cost of several hundred dollars from year to year.

Takes $925 at Glen View

The Glen View Golf club, with a membership of 350, eighteen special members and 115 on the waiting list, has an initial membership fee of $750 and annual dues amounting to $175 a year.

The new Evanston Golf club has a membership of 400. The club is not now open to new membership but several members have sold their cards lately. The last recorded sale was at $605. A former member who has moved to New York is asking $1,000 for his card, but as yet he has not found a buyer.

The Westmoreland club has a membership of 400 and has recently increased the cost of a certificate of membership from $300 to $500. Its annual dues are $100.

Bob O'Link Increases

The price for membership in the Bob O'Link club at Highland Park has also been increased to $500.

In spite of this increase the records show that there are over two hundred on the waiting lists of the four clubs. The clubs maintain excellent links and there are many devotees of the game that are willing to pay the high cost of following the sport. There are two reasons for the increased cost of membership. In the first place the clubs are desirous of obtaining increased revenue so that they might keep the course in the perfect condition that discriminating players demand. The cost of labor necessary to the maintenance of the links is increasing and must be met by larger funds. In the second place, most of the clubs have larger memberships than the course can accommodate on special days. At almost any time during such days players have to wait fifteen to twenty minutes for the opportunity to tee off.

Foster Feds Win Game

Foster Federals of Evanston won a final game from the Glencoe team by a score of 11 to 4.

HUTCHINSON TAKES SKOKIE TOURNAMENT

Jock Hutchinson, the Glen View pro, won the open tournament last Friday at Skokie with 72-24-146 for the thirty-six hole effort. Hutchinson's victory carried with it $125. Cyril Walker of the Golden Valley club won second prize, $75, with 74-74-149. Billy Mehlhorn of Oak Park and Arthur Clarkson of Kenosha deadlocked with 149 and split $60, which constituted the combined third and fourth prizes. Willie Kidd of Algonquin took a brand new $10 bill, the fifth and last emolument, by registering 151. Only four amateurs were in the event, Rial T. Rolfe, the young Ridgemoor star, leading the contingent with 163, James Barnes of St. Louis, holder of the western open title, which he will defend at Cleveland next week, was off his stride and finished well down the list with 156. Bob MacDonald of Indian Hill notched an 84 in the first round and then withdrew from the tournament.

Consider the Dorris car as an investment

You cannot at any price get a greater return in motor-car service, satisfaction and pleasure than the Dorris will render you.

The Dorris car costs more than many other cars—we are proud to say it—because it represents so very much more in motor car value. Here are some of the elements of value that go into the making of the Dorris.

Fourteen years' experience building fine cars. The Dorris today is the product of those fourteen years of priceless automobile knowledge.

Personal attention to each Dorris car that comes from the builders. Not volume, not cheapness, but QUALITY. Each Dorris is hand built.

Correct mechanical principles. The Dorris is built RIGHT mechanically. Dorris established the valve-in-head motor, the unit power plant, the multiple disc clutch—now widely copied by other makes of cars. And the Dorris has brought these mechanical features to the last point of perfection.

Beauty in design and completeness in equipment. Although the creation of conservative builders, the Dorris represents the best thought in automobile art of today. The body lines are straight and graceful. The silhouette is stylish and modern, yet dignified and refined. The equipment is complete to the last detail.

When you invest in the Dorris you obtain the ultimate in automobile value.

The number of Dorris cars is limited. You will do well to investigate and place your order with us promptly.
