

CANDIDATES FAVOR GOOD ROADS MOVE

Investigation Discloses Every Presidential Candidate Would Boost Good Roads For Entire Country

Although the various presidential candidates may differ radically on almost everything from the cause of the high cost of living to the best way of handling the League of Nations problem, there is one thing on which they agree.

Without a single exception, all the candidates are in favor of good roads. Each is a whole hearted good roads booster and believes that the future economic welfare of the country depends largely upon the proper development of the highways.

Give Statements

The opinions of the various candidates were expressed in statements recently made to the travel and transport bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company. The statements were decidedly characteristic of the men who made them. A person could almost tell, by simply reading the statements, who made them, even if their names were omitted.

Herbert Hoover, for instance, said that good roads could be built and maintained only by the establishment of a proper organization. William G. McAdoo said that good roads were needed to supplement the railroads of the country, the failure of which developed a problem which seriously menaced our economic development and prosperity.

War Showed Need

Major General Leonard Wood, in advocating more and better roads said that their need had been clearly shown during the past war. Senator Poindexter stresses the fact that national roads should be built with a view to military defense as well as civil and commercial use. Governor Frank O. Lowden pointed out the fact that good roads would check the flow of young men and women from the farms to the cities.

Warren G. Harding declared that transportation has kept pace with human progress and asserted that unless better transportation could be provided future progress would be halted.

Peace Highway

William J. Bryan suggested that the conclusion of peace gives an opportunity to celebrate the ending of the greatest of world wars by building a memorial peace way, reaching into every state of the union.

Some of the statements of the candidates follow:

Herbert Hoover: "Arguments for good roads are so evident that they need no reiteration. What is needed is organization to maintain what roads we have and to build more roads. Much of this must depend upon purely local effort and it is by the creation of organization to build up such activities that our country makes its best progress."

Senator Warren G. Harding: "Transportation has made every avenue of civilization. There is no advancement in production and exchange until there are highways to facilitate the transportation involved."

Lessens Freight Costs

Governor Frank O. Lowden: "Good roads mean greatly lessened transportation costs. The increase the value of the farms. They make consolidated rural schools possible. With good roads life becomes easy and agreeable in the country and the flow of our young men and women from the country to the city is checked."

William G. McAdoo: "The failure of the railroads to keep pace with the growth of the country has developed a transportation problem which seriously menaces our economic development and prosperity. Our best chance of immediate relief is great systems of state highways so laid out and constructed as to supply by automobile and motor truck the additional transportation facilities the country imperatively needs."

Major General Lenoard Wood: "An adequate road system is the commercial liason which makes for their proper co-ordination of the requirements of producer, manufacturer and consumer. The need for such a system was strikingly demonstrated during the war, and it is as great now as it ever was. Good roads mean better and more productive farms, bringing remote rural sections into close touch with the market. By providing the development of farms we perform a service of inestimable value to the country as a whole."

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS SHIP-BY-TRUCK WEEK

Calling upon the people of Illinois who are interested in transportation to give especial attention to the importance of the highways as part of the country's transportation system, Frank O. Lowden, Governor of Illinois and presidential aspirant, has by proclamation named the week of May 17 to 22 for observance as "Ship by Truck" week. The proclamation follows:

"I take pleasure in calling the attention of the people of Illinois to the action being taken by the executives of many of the other states of the union in naming the week of May 17 to 22 as 'Ship by Truck' Week.

"The transportation system of the country will not be complete until our highways are improved so as to permit the use of both passenger cars and trucks throughout the entire year. The state of Illinois is making a most determined effort in the face of great odds brought about by existing conditions to complete, the earliest possible moment, such a system of highways reaching every section of the state.

"In harmony with the action of the other states, I am asking all citizens of Illinois interested in transportation to give special thought and attention during that week, not only to transportation by way of motor truck, but also to the economical development of such a highway system as will enable us to bring about at an early date the use of this method of delivering the products of our farms and factories."
