BOAT LINES HIT BY AUTOMOBILE TRAFFIC

Seattle, Wash.—Puget Sound steamboat lines are being hard hit by the automobile. The latter is doing to the ordinary steamboat much that the jitney has long done to the street car. Fully one-third of the Puget Sound passenger packets are tied up—have been since early summer. With the advent of the automobile and its ever-increasing number, steamboat excursioning has become less popular. The cross-sound lines, particularly those plying between Seattle and the Navy Yard, continue to do a good business, but the traditional Sunday excursion up and down the sound and through the island and reaches of this great arm of the sea and no longer appeals. The auto ride over the lake encircling boulevards and along the highways, county, state and national, through the enchanting scenery of mountain and stream, has taken its place and the prosaic steamboat remains tied at its pier.
