Shop Sponsored by Daughters of American Revolution Offers Opportunity for Americanization Work

HAND WROUGHT ARTICLES

Christmas Shoppers may purchase Variety of Articles Made by Hands of Foreign Born

Patriotic Americanization work is being done by the Daughters of the American Revolution in the New America Shop which is located at 1409 Stevens building, Chicago.

The Shop is a market for the work of foreign born women and is designed to encourage them to carry on the wonderful handcraft of the old world and for the purpose of bringing together the new American citizens and the old American citizens so that they may become friends.

Must Lend a Hand

If we are true to our ideals, we must all lend a hand at making good Americans of people who come to us from foreign lands. No greater influence can be brought to bear against the "red" propaganda of Eastern Europe than through this practical Americanization work. If you will call at the Shop when doing your Christmas shopping you will find the work of twenty-five nationalities are here represented.

Here one may buy Armenian embroideries and filigree jewelry, the Hedebo and Clunney lace of the Danish, fine linen embroidery by Italian or Irish, beads and elaborate cross stitch patterns done by Ukrainians. Then there are examples of fine luster ware by an Austro-Hungarian and iridescent glass by a Scotch woman, bead bags by Holland Dutch and American Indians, also Mexican drawn work. The Belgians excel in exquisite lace, the Swedes are notable for hand weaving, the Norwegians are represented in Hardanger, the Russians in hand-made lace and knitted shawls.

Out of this assortment, it is hoped, you will be able to choose something that will please you and in this way encourage this work.

STANLEY MOTOR Carriages

It is pretty generally accepted that the most efficient way to fight cold is with heat. The Stanley's Pilot Light provides this heat. It obviates the necessity of anti-freezing solutions, causes the engine to start readily and pull smoothly. Zero weather does not effect Stanley Performance.
