Real News

No matter what may have been one's attitude of mind toward the advertising sections of the press, there is no question now of their news value. Nothing more eloquently points to the progress that the country is making back to normal economical conditions than the advertisements in which are presented opportunity for buying the materials that are essential to the daily life of the people, and at prices far below those which have prevailed in the last two years and more. Nothing speaks more convincingly of the determination of the American business man to accept the burden of loss which attends the readjustment to the new conditions of the peace time when these pages in the newspapers in which the new scale of prices is announced to the general public.

People generally are beginning to take a new and active interest in the matter of the cost of the materials that they use. Those days of easy come, easy go money are past and realization of the folly that prompted the extravagant waste of the time of plenty is beginning to dawn. It is in this chastened mood that the public now lends its attention to the advertising sections of the newspaper, and reads, with an interest never before given the subject of home provisions, the news which the merchants are offering them from day to day.

The news of the day has not been completely acquired without that which is to be found upon the pages in which the news of the stores is displayed.

There Is No Peace

The statement of Major General Wood that world peace has not yet been won is accepted as sound truth by the whole general public that has given any thought at all to world conditions. Nothing is more apparent than that there is not only no real peace in Europe, but that there is no real desire for peace without the advancement of the selfish interests of the several nations and groups that are giving vent to their dissatisfaction with the terms of the peace and the plan of settlement of disputed territory by local disturbances and pressure intended to bring about a change of conditions.

The absence of peace is not due primarily so much to the outcome of the war itself as to a disposition everywhere to revolt against things as they are. What it is, in the majority of cases, objectionable to somebody and that somebody is unwilling to submit his own preference to the general good. The habit of fighting has grown upon the whole world, sick as were the peoples engaged in the war of the battle and the hardships of war. They are not able to settle down to the routine of peace, not able to accept anything but the whole of what they think they have gained by the war, forgetful of the conflicting claims that make entire satisfaction of everybody a thing impossible to accomplish.

The high tension of the war period, the intense activity of the whole population, the abnormal industrial conditions and the radical change in these conditions have made in the minds of a very great number of people have bred a spirit of dissatisfaction, the settlement of which must be the first concern of the several nations if there is to be the world peace which we all are thinking we seek. Close attention to its own private affairs on the part of every nation, a policy of allowing others to manage theirs, and a willingness to compromise in those matters in which there are conflicting claims will bring us through the period of unrest into the period of world peace, and nothing else will.

JANS-LAMKE MOTOR COMPANY SECURES HAYNES AGENCY HERE

The Jans-Lamke Motor company has contracted for distribution of the Haynes cars in the north shore territory and will maintain their sales and service station at 1013-17 Davis street, Evanston.

Haynes patrons in Evanston and throughout the north shore who have already placed their stamp of approval on these high-grade cars of character will more highly appreciate and value the new commodious headquarters of the Haynes.

The Jans-Lamke Motor company extends to all users and lovers of fine motor cars a most cordial and hospitable invitation to visit their salesroom and to familiarize themselves with the perfected mechanism of the perfected Haynes light sixes and twelves an achievement that has been made possible only by a successful record of twenty-eight years of automobile manufacturing.

The Haynes is America's first car and the Haynes company always presents the world's best values in motor cars.

The 1921 models in American-made passenger automobiles incline toward low, straight lines in deep set bodies with moderately sized wheels and high hoods. Colors are displayed in many different shades.

In spite of the fact that thousands of automobile tourists from all over the world annually visit Switzerland, they are not permitted to enter the community of Grisons. The cantonal authorities of the Grisons ordained in 1910 that motor vehicles may not use the roads of the canton.
