Back Again

The peace treaty is reported on its way to the White House for a second visit. It is to be hoped that the welcome given it there will not be affected by the earlier history of the document in Washington.

Nothing is more important to the success of the Harding administration, from the point of view of the citizen who wishes to see the government administered in the best interest of the nation as a whole, than the willingness of the President to break away from what has marked the past and to be free from consideration of inconsistency.

No one is a sufficiently ardent Republican to wish that the new administration should be bound by the conduct of the Republican Congress of the last administration. An open mind, freedom to change his position where it is for the benefit of the nation that there be such change and an indifference to the career of the peace treaty in the last two years must be President Harding's attitude toward our relations with the nations of Europe. We shall have no progress unless there is evidence of this independence of thought and action.

France is evidently eager to know what is the real thought of the new administration. For that reason comes the man who knows the peace situation as perhaps nobody else in France does know it, to have personal interview with the President of the United States. He is obviously under the impression that Mr. Harding's position when a member of the Senate is not necessarily that which he will hold as President. The American people will hope for a satisfactory end to the visit of the former premier almost, if not quite, as eagerly as the people of France. Whatever will help to clear the atmosphere in the matter of the peace treaty and to solve the question of the adjustment of what has been done and what is yet to be done to meet the obligations of this country toward the rest of the world and to put us in the right relationship with both our recent friends and our recent enemies, will be gratefully welcomed by the American public.

We hope that M. Viviani will come to Washington with a disposition to consider the attitude of the American government toward the peace treaty from the point of view of the American public and that President Harding will be able to forget all that was said and done in the Senate of the last Congress, that the two will be able to rid their minds of obscuring prejudices and get at the treaty in a way to reach an adjustment fair to everybody, one in accordance with the honor of the United States and for the cementing of the friendship between this country and our late allies.

Cleaning out cellars and building summer cottages are examples of temporary jobs with the St. Paul, Minn., employment bureau and Women's auxiliary of the American Legion have obtained for more than six hundred unemployed veterans after an appeal has been made to every employer and householder in that city. The average compensation for temporary employment is fifty cents an hour. Farmers near the Twin Cities are taking advantage of the opportunity to obtain ex-service men as farm hands and are paying from $50 a month, with room and board, upward.

GLEN VIEW ROAD NOW TO BE BUILT BY THE COUNTY

The county board has awarded contracts for the building of some 19 miles of country roads at a cost of $837,000. The bids averaged $42,383 a mile, although Governor Small, only a few days ago threw out bids for state roads to cost an average of $37,850 in the northern part of the state, because he said they were too high.

The north shore is particularly interested in one of the roads to be built, the Glen View road, 2.9 miles, for which the low bid was $37,750 a mile. The roads built by the county last year cost an average of $42,792 a mile. Work is to be commenced upon it very soon.

CARRIED LIVE SNAKE TO CHURCH, ARRESTED; CLAIMS PART OF RITE

Ft. Wayne, Ala.—J. Wiley Reese, who carried a live snake to church with him and was charged with disturbing religious worship, was released by the non-jury division of the De Kalb county court when he pleaded that the reptile was taken as part of a religious rite in which he believed. Judge Steele decided the matter involved the defendant's conscience and religious convictions, therefore the court was forced to release him. The worshippers had fled at the appearance of the snake.

Wrong Numbers

If, for any reason, you are connected with a telephone other than the one you called, move the receiver hook slowly up and down four or five times, or until the operator answers. (The signal will not operate if hook is moved rapidly.)

Tell her that you have been given a wrong number, and repeat the number you called for.

This routine is necessary to avoid the possibility of having the nickel "collected" by the operator (if using a coin box telephone), or having the call charged (if using a measured service telephone). There is, of course, no charge where a wrong number is given, but sometimes the operator does not know about it and should be told.
