A Right Step

Building brick has been reduced twenty-five per cent in price. This action of the Illinois Brick company is explained as a hint to the men of the building trades that the manufacturers of building materials are ready to do their part in the bringing down of the cost of construction to the point where the long awaited building boom may materialize. It is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough that it should be taken simply by one firm or group of firms. It must be general, just as an agreement to wage reduction would have to be general were it to be entered into by the men of the building trades.

It is no wonder that everybody is suspicious of the honest intentions of everybody else when there is so little evidence of a disposition to try to revive building on both sides of the controversy concerning where reduction shall be given. The manufacturers of building materials are fewer in number than the men of the building trades, they are men of a higher degree of mental training, whether they are better endowed or not, and they could do much worse than follow in the footsteps of the Illinois Brick company in the announcement of a material reduction in the price of the products of their plants.

HAYNES DECLARES 100 PER CENT BUSINESS

Jans-Lamke Receives Encouraging Report From Haynes Factories

Jans-Lamke Motor company receives following letter from Haynes factory:

"One hundred per cent business," is the gratifying announcement issued by Alton G. Seiberling, vice president and general manager of the Haynes Automobile company, Kokomo, Ind. The announcement was made immediately after checking up the volume of business done during the month of March as compared with the same month last year.

The Haynes company is probably the first of the big automobile manufacturers to report a return to normal conditions. Undoubtedly this favorable situation is due, in a great part, to the widespread demand which has been created among automobile buyers everywhere for the Haynes Fifty, the smaller and lighter Haynes five-passenger, six-cylinder touring car.

This demand is evidenced in the many large "drive-aways" of Haynes cars from the factory at Kokomo, which are being inaugurated by Haynes distributors from all sections of the country.

The Jans-Lamke Motor company will receive two carloads of Haynes Fifty models this week.

One of the largest automobile plants in England has reached an average productive output of 150 cars a week, with a maximum of 175. This amount is three times greater than it was before the war. Employment during the past year has been given between 7,000 and 8,000 people.
