

Who's Who Among Business Men of Winnetka

From the number of answers received by the Who's Who Editor of the Winnetka Weekly Talk it is quite evident that the residents of Winnetka are better acquainted with their local merchants than most people would think. It was just a few of the newer business men in town who proved to be the real stumbling blocks. The old ones like M. K. Meyer, Lee Adams and Lou Vollmann were easy but Killian, Santi and Otten were the hard ones. You had a lot of trouble finding that picture of Otten, didn't you.

Clarence Happ was the first man to turn in his answer. He arrived in our office at 10:35 last Saturday morning. He just managed to get in ahead of Brochu of the Holland Furnace company. Brochu stubbed his toe on Jim Maloney and Ruggero so he was out of luck anyway. From 11 o'clock Saturday till 6 o'clock Wednesday night the Who's Who Editor was a busy man receiving answers and registering them.

Maybe we will have another Who's Who contest next year. In the meantime you had better get acquainted with all of your local merchants so you won't be fooled next time.

If the prize winners will write a letter to the Who's Who Editor telling him what store they want the credit memorandum on it will be sent to them by return mail.
