

CHICAGO EDUCATORS LAUD LOCAL SCHOOLS

Two Groups of Chicago Principals Examine Methods

Winnetka's public schools under the direction of Superintendent Washburne, are creating nation-wide interest because of the unique and efficient methods employed in the "Individual Instruction" system.

On Wednesday of this week two groups of principals of the Chicago grammar schools visited Winnetka for the purpose of investigating and examining the educational plan that is causing such widespread interest. The groups that visited Winnetka were two of the seven auxiliaries comprising the 350 principals in the Chicago schools, and which are selected to conduct research work and formulate plans for more progressive teaching methods.

John L. Lewis, principal of the Raymond school and president of one of the Chicago Principals' auxiliaries, when asked for a statement concerning his opinion of the Winnetka Instruction Plan, said:

Praises Winnetka System

"Our groups are in the habit of investigating new and progressive educational methods. We came to the Winnetka schools to examine the standards here, and to learn what the Winnetka Plan represents. I like the schools, like the methods. Mr. Washburne is doing a great work. The school is unique and there are a great many features of Mr. Washburne's system that might well be adopted, not only in Chicago schools, but in similar schools throughout the country."

George A. Beers, another auxiliary leader, when interviewed by a representative of the Winnetka Talk, said: "The institutions are few that attract such general interest among Chicago school principals and demand investigation such as we are making. Winnetka should be proud of her splendid school system and the remarkable educational advantages afforded its school children."

"AT ECKARTS"

"Just Hardware"—at Eckarts. It isn't our idea to be the least bit fancy, hardware is our line and that is what we want to sell.

People come here, expecting to find what they want, at the price that they should pay for that article. That is what they get.

Taking it all in all, we only try to give everyone what they want. If they come in for a rake we don't try to sell them a hoe, but we always have the rake. We make a living, we are entitled to that, but the price of everything that goes out of this store is a fair one, and in most every instance competes fairly with downtown prices.
