

Chinese Learning Astounds Reynolds

government schools are now teaching modern science. The very alphabet is being changed, or rather an alphabet is being for the first time introduced. Marvelous results are being told and retold of how even an ignorant coolie can after six months instruction, learn enough to read the posters and news bulletins which are becoming such a power in the dissemination of knowledge. Machinery and transportation facilities are coming to relieve the daily toil and remove the other bar. To be sure, in Peking, the age-old capital of the Empire, and today the First city of the Chinese Republic, they to this day water their dusty and unpaved streets by drawing the water up, hand over hand from an open well by the roadside, carrying the bucket to the middle of the street and there scattering it by means of a long-handled dipper. But machinery is coming and general education is coming and the hungry longing of centuries is going to be increasingly gratified and the boys and girls of China are going to know and do.

Real Hall of Learning

We have wandered far from the Halls of Confucious,—and yet perhaps not so far after all. But to return for a moment,—it was quite delightful to find never an image nor an idol nor a figure of any kind. Just the splendid shady courtyards, the halls with their great stone tablets close carved with all the Chinese classics, and the spacious rooms where the teachers sat while they explained the classics and examined their pupils. In one hall we saw a rare treasure, ten black stones, each hewn into cylinder form and covered with characters of the ancient Chinese seal writing. These go back three thousand years and record the hunting expeditions of a certain provincial king. They have been through all sorts of vicissitudes. One of them is partially spoiled because some time back in the ages, it was partly hollowed out and was used as the under stone in a handmill. After being rescued and again lost and found yet again, they have at last come to rest very properly here in this Temple of Learning where the scholars of all the world may come to study and pore over the queer pictures.

We found the beautiful and quiet grounds a new tranquility of spirit which even the insistence of the gatekeepers for more silver coins could not disturb. We want to know more of this sage whose teachings have done so much to mold the life of China.

Fascinating Country

We are increasingly fascinated by the remarkable past of this great country. Our imaginations are kindled by the possibilities for her future. We long to follow up the avenues of inquiry and study which open on every side. But for the present most of our time and energy is spent in trying to follow the intricacies of the most abominable language ever invented by man. Dr. Heminway of Shansi says that one of the older missionaries once characterized the Chinese language as "an invention of the devil to keep people from understanding each other." We agree.

Our best wishes to you all.

Sincerely,
Charlotte and Paul Reynolds.

Attractive Show Rooms To Feature Richardson Garage

Vast improvements in Richardson's garage, Elm street east of Lincoln avenue, were underway this week with the construction in progress on the concrete foundation of a $14,000 addition to the structure.

The addition will extend from the present garage structure to the building line on Elm street. Included in the new section will be a storage space for eighteen cars, a spacious and attractive show room and offices.

The North Shore Buick agency occupies a portion of Richardson's garage and will have space in the new show room.

In accordance with the terms of a recently enacted Village ordinance the garage has placed its gasoline filling station on the curbing. The new station is now in operation.

Fred Richardson Jr., is the proprietor and general manager of Richardson's garage.

TO those of us who really care about our appearance, it is well to remember that a properly corseted woman may retain her original grace long after the woman carelessly uncorseted has become ill-proportioned and unattractive.

Take for example the Indian race: the young girl is often a specimen of agile, supple beauty, but the Indian squaw of forty.... Let us tell you something of the comfortably protecting Type Corsetry that Gossard artistry has created.
