

New Skokie School Pride of Winnetka

heimer Memorial Assembly hall and the William G. Hibbard Memorial gymnasium.

Beautiful Auditorium

The Memorial hall will seat 840 in fixed open chairs, the floor being pitched toward the stage. There is an orchestra pit, and the stage itself is of adequate size for most school activities. But by throwing open folding doors the gymnasium is added to the stage thus providing ample room for elaborate performances and pageants.

The William G. Hibbard Memorial gymnasium is a gymnasium of standard size, finished with salt glazed brick on the inside, and is well lighted. Besides the apparatus room and physical director's office shown in the plans, there is a shower room in the basement. The corridors flanking the gymnasium open out to the playground and the Skokie.

Emphasize Practical Work

The special rooms are of unusual interest, since they make possible the practical training over and above that secured from books.

The wood-working shop, for example, is a large, well-lighted, brick-lined room equipped with benches, wood-working machinery and a machine lathe. Separated from the wood-working shop on the east by a glass partition is a small forge room with one or two forges to be used in connection with the shop work. On the west is the print shop, to which the printing presses, type cases, etc., will be moved from the Horace Mann School.

Science, Cooking Rooms

On the opposite side of the north corridor are the general science laboratory, cooking room, and sewing room. The sewing room is provided with fitting rooms in which the girls may try on the dresses they make for themselves. The sewing room opens into the cooking room by two doors, so that it may be used also as a lunch room. The partition between the two rooms has a sliding panel, through which food can be passed to the counter in the sewing room, the sewing tables being used as lunch tables at noon.

The cooking room has a kitchen unit in the corner nearest the sewing room where school lunches will be prepared, the rest of the room being occupied by standard domestic science desks and equipment.

Beyond the cooking room is a general science laboratory which will also be used as a session room for the children. Class room No. 13, the first room north of the assembly hall, is finished as an art room. It contains a large open fire place. There are casement windows with window seats and the whole room is made to simulate a living room. Here the girls will learn the principles of interior decoration as well as receive their regular instruction in art work. Farther down the corridor comes the finishing room, which is for the joint use of the art department and the shops. Children from the art room take their rougher work into the finishing room and boys from the wood-working shop do their painting and varnishing here, away from the sawdust of the manual traing room.

Enough has been told to indicate the ingenious economy in use of space. The school is thus highly efficient as well as a very definite addition to the beauty of Winnetka. As planting is developed in the garden courts and surrounding the school there is to be here a school of which Winnetka may well be proud. Twelve acres of land provide adequate playground facilities. To the west lies the ever-fascinating Skokie. Truly here is Winnetka's pledge of its belief that out of the boys and girls of today come happy and useful citizens of tomorrow.

Autos, Mules Kill More Than Planes

infirmary where he requested the Doctor to wash his eyes thinking that oil had blinded him. The Doctor gave him a good cigar to smoke and seated him in an easy chair. In the meantime, the instruments had been sent to the laboratory and a rough cabiration made which showed that a height of nearly eight miles had been attained and that the plane had descended in a straight nose dive 36,000 feet in two minutes developing a downward speed of 375 miles per hour. At 1800 feet the Major regained consciousness. In fifteen seconds more the plane would have hit the earth. The Doctor grasped these facts and rushed back to the Major,—took the cigar away from him, put him to bed and said, "Schroeder, you're a dead man and don't know it."

Coast to Coast in 8 Hours

Major Schroeder explained that the 2400 miles from San Francisco to New York, air line, could easily be accomplished in eight hours, with the assistance of the trade winds which blow at well nigh 300 miles per hour.

Major and Mrs. Schroder have a plane now in which they take weekend jaunts. They made the trip to Omaha, Nebraska, to attend the American Legion Convention, starting after breakfast and arriving before noon.

After the meeting, several military pilots renewed their acquaintance with "Shorty" and reminisced over the days of the war. And everyone went shortcake and the Major's story of modern adventure had hit the spot.
