Year 'round Flowers to Become Possibility?

By F. F. ROCKWELL
 (Horticulturalist Editor, Farm and Fireside)

Of course, if you care anything about flowers, you have some hardy flowers around the place; perennials as they are called, because they come back every year all by themselves, without your having to do anything about it.

Among the first handy flowers that one would like to have are peonies and iris. You know the gorgeous blooms of the former.

Succession of "Bloom"
 But why stop with two or three kinds of hardy flowers, as so many people do?

Do you realize that there are dozens of perennials just as hardy, just as well able to take care of themselves, and just as generous with their gifts of color and good cheer as are the peonies and iris?

Why not select a half dozen or a dozen different things that you have not grown before to set out this spring, so that you can know the pleasure of having flowers in your garden, or to cut for bouquets for your table all season through? You know what a difference it makes when you have friends in to dinner for Sunday, or the Missionary Society meeting at your house on Wednesday afternoon, if there are a few flowers to put on the table or around the room!

A dozen different varieties will be enough to give you some flowers almost every week from April to October.

Flowers For Every Month

Most of the annual flowers, such as asters or sweet peas or marigolds, bloom early or late largely according to the time they are planted—unless they happen to run into dry weather, when they often dry up and fail without blooming at all. But every "perennial" has a definite season of bloom and will come into flower at this time year after year, with only a few days variation. So generous are many of the perennials, however, that they continue flowering from the time that they first come into bloom until frost.

In fact some of the perennials are so hardy that they will go right on blooming even after a hard frost!

In the following list I have mentioned only a few of the many splendid hardy perennials which may be obtained at a very moderate price and are easily grown.

The kinds which I have mentioned are absolutely hardy not only in their capacity to withstand the coldest winter, but also in their ability to look after themselves with the least possible attention.

The times given for their periods of bloom are approximate; they may be a little earlier in the far south or in a forward season, or a little later in a backward season or in the extreme north.

April. Moss Pink (Plox subulata). This is the little low growing, ground-cover plant that makes such a bright spot of color in the spring, before most other living things have realized that winter has gone. It will hold its own against grass and neglect.

April. Hardy Alyssum. Sometimes called "Golden Tuft" because of its clusters of bright yellow flowers, grows but 12 inches or so high.

May. Lily of The Valley. When this delightful, fragrant little flower will go on blooming year after year, under absolute neglect, it seems hard to understand why there should not be a patch of it near almost every house in the country.

May. Columbine. The "hybrids" show many bright colors. Plant if possible against stone work, or a fence where its graceful form will show on to the best advantage.

June. Hardy Pink (Dianthus). Not only beautiful, but with the most bewitching fragrance. Particularly good for cutting.

June, Hardy Phlox. Beautiful colors in the named varieties, from pure white, through pinks and lilacs, to dazzling crimson. Impossible to have too many.

July. Larkspur (Delphinium) Very tall; one of the showiest of all flowers, and yet extremely beautiful.

July. Hollyhock. Too well known to need any description; fine against the house, or fence. Should have good rich soil.

August. Golden Glow (Rudbeckia). Extremely hardy, good for planting against the barn or garage, or in any out of the way place where a mass of color is wanted; six feet high.

August, Flame flower, or Red-hot-poker Plant (Tritoma). Blooms from August on, making a most gorgeous display. Also fine for cutting.

September. Japanese Anemone. Not so well known as most of the above, but a marvelously beautiful flower. The big white "wind-flower" blossoms are born on long graceful stems; especially fine for cutting.

Plan now to set out some or all of the above this spring. Make sure of having flowers all summer long.

'Pears Like One Can't Build 'em Fast Enough

Winnetka do grow! As rapidly as George F. Gonsalves, local builder, could complete four new home buildings they were occupied by new residents.

Robert Biddle of Chicago and the Evanston hotel has taken the residence at 294 Forest avenue. Fred Healy of Wilmette has purchased the new place at 284 Forest avenue. C. A.

Ball, formerly of 484 Elder lane, has purchased the home at 296 Forest avenue. James McNulty of Chicago is owner of the new residence at 476 Linden avenue.
