GOOD EXAMPLE BEST RELIGION TEACHER

Men's Class Discusses Father and Child Subject

The responsibility of the father toward the child was the subject that awakened animated interest at the session of the Men's Sunday Morning class at Community House last Sunday. The discussion was thought by many to have been the most interesting since the inception of the class several months ago.

Clearly, the members of the class appreciated fully that too rigid insistence on religious influence during youth has permanently antagonized many men toward religion and the church. On the other hand a child left to itself, it was argued, is in great danger of growing up a pagan and materialist. It seemed to be agreed that though ideas must not be imposed on the child it should be "exposed to and sold" on the very best ones carefully selected.

Need Force of Example

Most important of all was considered the force of example. This was picturesquely illustrated and pointed to the necessity of the father's attending church and setting an example of personal religious faith if the child is to develop along similar lines.

An interesting digression covered the effect upon the child of a religious vacation in the summer time and the possibilities during the vacation. Of making our summer services take a vital place in a larger number of lives in our village. Naturally enough this led to the seriousness with which the men of the class would commit themselves to church attendance during the summer. The response to the suggestion was surprisingly earnest and inclusive.

Riches and Religion

Next Sunday the class continues the study of a Judean King whose religious life was thwarted by prosperity. It will doubtless introduce a discussion of whether religion and material success are mutually compatible and if not how they are to be reconciled.

The class meets each Sunday at 9:45 o'clock in the Community House gymnasium.

RECALLS WAR DAYS

Many villagers need must rub their eyes Thursday morning when they beheld what appeared to be a wartime scene, what with hundreds of khaki-clad men passing through town.

The men marched from Fort Sheridan to Chicago and the scene was not unlike the incidents of some five years ago.

Continue Discussion On Church Membership

In response to numerous requests Rev. James Austin Richards has arranged a second open conference on Church Membership to be held in the Winnetka Congregational Church library tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock.

At that time Mr. Richards will endeavor to explain just what membership in that church means, and all persons who have been thinking about becoming members, whether by confession of faith, or by re-affirmation of faith, or by letters from other churches, will be most welcome at this informal gathering.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Eric Nelson and family wish to extend their sincere thanks and gratitude for the many kindnesses and sympathy shown them in their recent bereavement. T6-1tc

"Get-Rich-Quick" Film

Next Community Picture

How a sleepy little town, without ambition, smugly satisfied with its own conservative traditions, can be transformed into a thriving, hustling and prosperous small city is amusingly set forth in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," a Cosmopolitan production for Paramount directed by Frank Borzage, which will be shown at the Community House April 28.

The picture details the adventures of those master confidence men, J. Rufus Wallingford and G. Horace Daw who descend upon Battlesburg, a Middle Western town, to fleece its citizens by means of hair-brained schemes. They find the town ultra-conservative but gradually the magnificent suavity of the crooks wins over the citizens and they "invest" generously. Wallingford and Daw, of course, have no intention of carrying out their so-called manufacturing projects, but their industry starts a real live boom and Battlesburg makes tremendous progress.
