

SEEK QUALITY IN COLLEGE STUDENTS

President Scott Seeks Best For Northwestern U.

"Not so many students but of better quality," are the words used by President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university in announcing the final figures on attendance. "Our classrooms are crowded to the limit and hereafter I shall be more deeply interested in quality and not in quantity. When we get the various new buildings Northwestern requires, we can open our doors to the hundreds of students who will be trying to enter but who cannot be accommodated during the next few years."

The final figures of all the schools and departments at Northwestern for 1921-22 were announced as being 8,519. It was thought the total would run over 9,000 but 800 duplications were finally weeded out in recapitulation which left the total somewhat below that of a year ago. By schools, Northwestern's attendance this year has been as follows:

College of Liberal Arts, 1,991; Graduate school, 289; Medical school, 456; Law school, 217; College of Engineering, 163; Dental school, 578; Music school, 340; Commerce, graduate students, 321; Commerce, Evanston, 334; Commerce, Chicago, 2,824; Medill School of Journalism, 38; School of Speech, 204; total, 7,735, less duplications, 44, net total, 7,711. Summer school, attendance, 1921, less duplications, 808. Grand total, 8,519.

President Scott gave as an indication of the zeal with which students are turning towards Northwestern, the experience of the Medical school whose freshman class for next fall is nearly all registered at present.

"Our Medical school can accommodate at present an average of only 100 in each of the five classes," he said. "That means that the freshman class next fall must net only 100 members. That number isn't quite registered at present but nearly so. We shall have to turn many applicants away from that school alone for want of accommodations of various kinds."
