HOME TREATMENT ESSENTIALS

Treatment of tuberculosis at home is a matter in which there are two essential elements: Expert advice and education on the part of the patient in the necessity of carrying out advice and in the protection of others from danger of infection through him. The relative importance of the two is debatable. From the point of view of the safety of the patient, the first is most important; from that of the safety of the general public, the second.

The community that sets up a branch of the organization whose purpose is the fighting of tuberculosis owes it to those who will come under its influence to provide for patients advice which is sound. Confidence of the patient, and the optimism that is a part of the disease, make it doubly necessary that there should be no mistake in the laying down of the rules of treatment and the nature of the life that must be led if there is to be recovery from the disease. That is a matter for the whole community to consider.

Chiefest among the difficulties in the care of tuberculosis is the conflict that too often arises between the natural love of a mother for her children and a proper consideration for their safety from infection through her. It is a hard thing to impress upon a woman suffering from the "plague" that the first element in her love for her children should be a willingness to sacrifice her own selfish desire to be near them and to enjoy their presence, to their safety and security of life not shadowed by the almost certainty of the disease if there is indulgence of it. That is a point that should never be missed by the nurse who visits homes in which there are mothers suffering from tuberculosis, a point that should be stressed always in the educational program of the tuberculosis organizations.

PROGRESS

The Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs has gone on record in a formal resolution as favoring experimentation on animals in order to forward the progress of science in understanding of the ills to which the human flesh is heir.

Such an act taken in the stronghold of prejudice such as exists in New England that what has been in the past ought to continue into the future suggests that the women of the club organizations everywhere are advancing from the sentimental into the practical and Massachusetts women are setting a pace with which women's organizations elsewhere may well fall in, for here is a means of establishing public opinion than which there is none more effective or more far reaching.

PENNSYLVANIA'S LESSON

Pennsylvania's governor explains the result of the primary election there on the ground that Gifford Pinchot was able to attract the woman's vote and that of the various factions that were disgruntled with the party organization. It's a very good explanation and as true as anything could be. The point in question is whether the Republican party there will accept the lesson that has been taught and remember that there is this balance to be reckoned with in the future.

The growing independence of thought in the electorate has become a factor that must be taken into consideration by political parties in the years to come. The induction of a great mass of new voters into the political body, voters whose traditions are less rigid than those of the old electorate, has developed a new condition. These two elements forbid assurance in the outcome of any election and especially do they make uncertain the machinations of a party organization that are directed by other motives than the seeking of the best good of the general public.

The latest use of the radio is in connection with a course of study adopted by New York University. First we had the little red school-house, then the extension courses, and now education by radio. With learning buzzing through the air about his head the man who fails to improve his mind is slothful indeed.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford Sedan with electric starting and lighting system and demountable rims with 3 1/2-inch tires all around, for every day in the year has no equal as a family car. Just as popular on the farm as it is in the city. In fact, it fits the family demands in every vocation of life. Large, roomy seats, finely upholstered, plate glass windows make it an open car in pleasant weather, while in rainy and inclement weather it becomes a closed car, dust-proof and rain-proof. It is ideal for social functions, the theatre, or parties; carrying the children to school, or for touring. It is not only comfortable, but really cozy, and above all, economical in operation and maintenance, and has all the Ford merits of strength and durability. We solicit your order for one. Come in and see it.
