Anchor Inn Adds $10,000 to Delta Gamma House Fund

A tea room with co-educated waitresses attracts the public to the extent of $10,000 a year. So the Delta Gamma sorority found when they balanced the books of Anchor Inn, on the grounds of the Community Golf club, before taking over the concession for the coming year, and they mourn the hard fate which makes this their last year at the inn. It will be torn down at the end of the season to make room for a new club house.

Every penny of profits from the inn goes into the $40,000 fund which the sorority must have before it builds itself a home. The tea room was started last May by the alumni and active chapters of the Delta Gamma in the former quarters of the Evanston Golf club. Co-eds painted the chairs and tables, and sewed the curtains and fuffed the cushions and arranged the flowers and camouflaged the cracks in the floor. Then more co-eds passed out sandwiches and cooling drinks to tired golfers in the grill, and served the meals in the upstairs dining room. Except for the kitchen help and a paid manager, all the workers are volunteers.

The inn has done so well that it opened with a flourish of paintbrushes and sewing-needles this year. On Decoration Day it served 200 diners, and on Saturday nights, it generally takes care of 100 persons.
