Gives Idea of Extensive Development of Telephone

Boston has more telephones than the combined countries of Belgium, Italy, Hungary, British India, Egypt and Luxembourg or more than in all of Australia, Belgium and Greece together.

Sixty-three per cent of the 27,800,000 miles of wire in the Bell telephone system is in underground cables. The underground mileage is nearly 18,000,000 miles.

The telephone properties of the Bell system cost about $1,500,000,000.

During the year 1920, approximately 23,000,000 board feet of lumber was used in the Bell system, or enough to construct a boardwalk six feet wide from Boston to Philadelphia.
