8,000,000 CARS TO NEED A FEW TIRES

"There are approximately 8,000,-000 automobiles in the United States. Men who have made a study of the industry, especially production figures for the last 20 years, have proven by law of averages that there will be a market in 1922 in replacements alone for practically 1,000,000 motor cars," says A. H. Jogeson of the North Shore Rubber company, Evanston.

"Every one of the 8,000,000 cars registered in the United States must need some new tires. Maybe it will be only one tire but more likely it will be two. Every one of the new cars will take four tires and at least one spare.

"That's the solid foundation upon which the automobile and tire industry rests today. The place the motor car has taken in the business, social, and economic life of the nation makes it plain to anyone that the number of cars in this country will female puppy, 3 mo. old. White with constantly increase. Some students of the industry believe that in five years there will be at least 15,000,000 to 16,000,000 automobiles in this country.

> "The tire manufacturers can see nothing but good business ahead of the readjustment in general business conditions now under way. Some predict an actual shortage of tires in T20-1tc the near future."
