

SEEK HOMES FOR NEEDY CHILDREN

Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society in Appeal

She had been put out of the house with her two children, one a little girl of seven, the other a baby only a few days old. The husband had deserted; his whereabouts were unknown. The forsaken mother, leading her little girl and carrying her baby in her arms, wandered about the streets of the city until they were exhausted and nearly famished. When their plight was discovered, the mother and baby were sent to a hospital and Pauline placed in the care of the Children's Home Society. Relief had come too late to the mother and baby, both of whom died soon after their admission to the hospital. When little Pauline heard of the death of her mother, she said: "Well, I am glad that Mama is gone; now she will not be put out in the cold any more without anything to eat."

Sheltered 9,000 Children

Nearly 9,000 needy children have been received and cared for during the past 33 years by the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. They have come from every county in the State, representing all ages and many nationalities. They are usually cared for in the Receiving Home at Evanston; or, if from Southern Illinois, in the Receiving Home at Du Quoin, but as soon as practical, are placed in carefully selected private families.

The Illinois Children's Home and Aid society believes that these little children, bereft of their own parents, can be best cared for under normal conditions in family homes. It, therefore, is appealing to the citizens of the State, who are in position to do so, to open their homes to them.

Study Background

The society is giving special attention to a study of the family background of the children who need homes. Thorough physical examinations are made and remediable defects are removed. The Institute for Juvenile Research assists in determining the mental capacity of doubtful children. This intensive study makes possible satisfactory adjustments between children and foster parents. The Society is in a position to know, so far as it can be humanely determined, that the children for whom it is seeking family homes are physically and mentally desirable for placement.

The ability of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society to care for so large a group of children is dependent upon the response made to appeals such as this. Christian families who want to do something for needy children and can make room in their home for bright little mischievous boys or girls, are urged to communicate with the Society concerning homeless children, who want folks to care for them, rather than institutions to live in.

The time saved each day by cutting out "hello" in telephone conversation in New York City alone would equal the working time of a man for six months.

Right Up to the Edges

IF YOU would eliminate waste and get full value for your printing expenditures, so gauge the size of your printed piece that it uses the full sheets of paper stock "right up to the edges."

Very often when you are planning to send out a circular, its size is such as to leave an unused margin of two, three, sometimes four or five inches from the edge of the full size sheet. But these edges can be used for printing up memorandum pages, little window and counter pasters, perhaps interesting enclosure slips for packages. Sometimes when you are using card stock for the main printing order, there is enough edge to the sheet to permit printing a number of standard return postcards. Or, if you use loose leaf booklets or memorandum pads, this surplus stock can be readily punched and perhaps trimmed again in order to fit your cover.

There are many little savings to be made in ordering your printing, which in the course of time amount to a very decided economy. Sometimes we can suggest the use of paper stock for various purposes which in reality saves you a good deal of money in the year's cost of your printing.
