Patience of Job? Judge Mickey Has It; Also Reward

Over a year ago Ralph Woodley, a Racine youth, was arrested and ordered to appear before Justice D. M. Mickey. A month passed and the lad did not show up. Another month passed with the same result. Finally a letter came to Judge Mickey from the boy's father saying he would appear later. Time passed on and the boy did not appear. More letters from the father to the judge followed.

Monday, motorcyclist Clement Ley, of Kenilworth, noticed a speeding car, gave chase and arrested the driver. When taken into court the offender was found to be Woodley, who had delayed his appearance for so long. The following day young Woodley and his father appeared to answer the charges. They wanted a continuance of the case.

"Can you give bond for your appearance?" the judge asked.

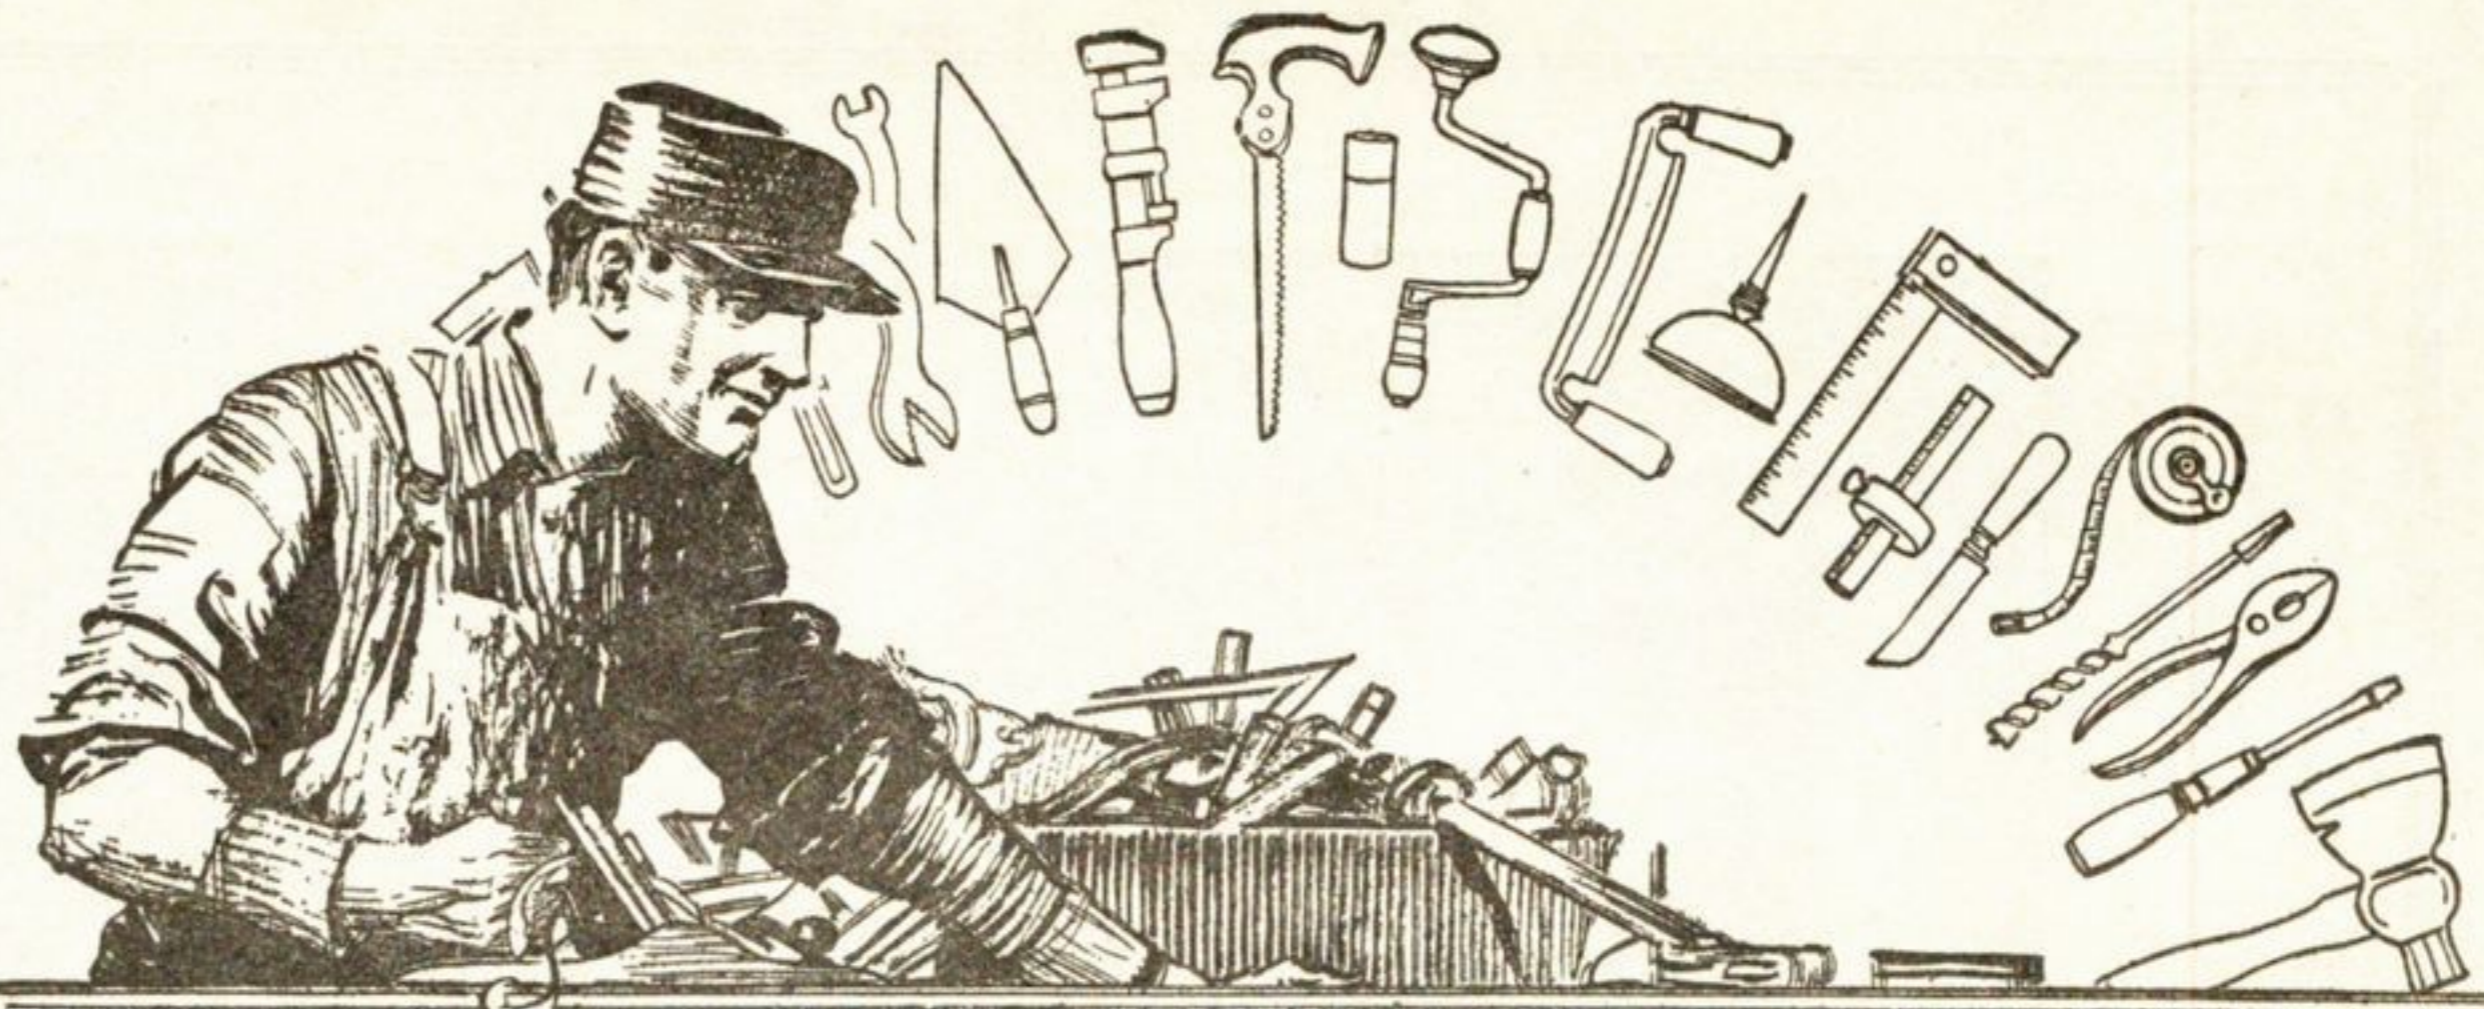

"Yes, sir," the father answered. "How much bond can you furnish? How much are you worth?" the judge queried again.

"Oh, I could get together a half-million dollars, if I had to." The case was continued until August 7.

Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," who has just returned from a year in Italy and England with the manuscript of a new book, will lecture at the University of Chicago, July 21, on "Literary Bolsheviki"; on July 28 Zona Gale, author of "Miss Lulu Bett," will speak on "The Novel and Beauty."

August 4 Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" will be given in dramatic recital by S. H. Clark, formerly Associate Professor of Public Speaking in the University of Chicago; August 11 there will be a recital by Ruth Ray, violinist; August 18 Carl Sandburg, the Chicago poet, will lecture on "The Finding of New Songs"; and August 25 "If Winter Comes" will be given in dramatic recital by Bertram Griffith Nelson.
