

HOW FAR CAN YOU TOW AN AIRPLANE?

Lexington Lark Pulls Limping Ship 174 Miles

Edward J. Wohlfarth, Lexington representative at Englewood, N. J., recently put his Lexington Lark to the most unique test in automobile history.

Mr. Wohlfarth, who is an enthusiastic Elk, with a couple of companions flew in an aeroplane from his home in Englewood to Atlantic City to attend the Elks' convention recently held there.

While making some exhibition flights over Atlantic City, motor trouble was encountered and Wohlfarth was compelled to land in his machine, a land plane, in the water. The plane was so badly damaged that further flight was impossible.

Atlantic City to Englewood

Mr. Wohlfarth wired his office at Englewood for his Lexington Lark, a car which had already, in one year's running, been put over 27,500 miles of road. When the Lexington arrived, the disabled aeroplane was hooked on behind, and the long run of 174 miles from Atlantic City to Englewood started.

Despite the fact that Mr. Wohlfarth was compelled to drive carefully and slowly, the Lark made the entire return trip on 10 gallons of gasoline, or an average of better than 17 miles on a gallon, and this despite the fact that the Lark had already seen long and hard usage.

Mr. Wohlfarth, who is an experienced automobile man, believes this is a record that no automobile has duplicated.

Majority Preference Proves Cadillac Value

It is a matter of record that more buyers choose Type 61 Cadillac than all other cars combined selling at the Cadillac price or higher.

The great majority of buyers of Type 61 are not led to its purchase primarily by a consideration of price.

Many of them could easily pay a great deal more for an automobile and would do so if they thought they could secure more than in the Type 61 Cadillac. But as their purchase indicates they conclude they can not secure more.

It is equally true that they could pay less, but just as they refuse to pay more for what they consider in no way better, so they refuse to pay less and accept what they believe to be inferior.

They buy Type 61 because after mature reflection they have a clear conviction that it is both the Standard of the World and the world's greatest motor car value.
