

SAYS CHURCH MUST BECOME 'GROWN UP'

Rev. Richards Cites Task of Modern Church

There was a general request for the publication of the sermon which Rev. James Austin Richards preached at the Winnetka Congregational church last Sunday morning. His theme was "The Prevailing Church," and he spoke of a number of characteristics such a church must have.

"It must be loyal to its Master," he said. "Through all the historical changes of church government and church theology, nothing has been so important as the vividness with which the church has been aware of Jesus and the loyalty it has shown him. They are false prophets who would make the church so wide that it is shallow, or so broad that it is dull.

Faith Should Be Prop

"But with this central loyalty of the church should go also the fearless and the open mind. The real believer is not the man who is always propping up his faith with arguments he would never think of using in any other connection, and always shielding his faith from questions and criticisms to which all other truth is exposed. Instead of propping his faith, the real believer asserts it is the one thing that does not need propping, but is itself able to be a prop to all that is good and true and beautiful. Instead of shielding his faith, he yearns to have it investigated and put to every test.

Church Must Grow Up

"The prevailing church must also be fraternal and unified and worshipful, and aware of a great task. That task is nothing less than to change the mind of the world. The technical and mechanical skill of the world has greatly outrun its character. Our scale of values is all awry. As a philosophy, materialism is dead. As a way of living, its curse is on us still. Civilization is like a six-year-old boy driving a Rolls-Royce car along Michigan avenue at five o'clock on a week day afternoon. There is something in us that has got to grow up, or the prospect of our earth is something to make the ruddiest man turn pale. And what is this something that must grow up, now almost smothered by wealth we do not know how to spend and powers that we do not know how to use? What is it if not the perception that men are more than things; that our communities of interest are as everything and our selfish interests are as nothing; that we are members one of another, not as a pretty sentiment, but as an ultimate reality that will slay us if we do not make it bless us; and that over all is God, pitying, struggling, compassionating, dying daily in it all?"

"The church is the one great institution set to work this change in the mind of the world. Not to try it is to be prevailed against. To attempt it is to be a prevailing church, else God himself is beaten."

DELEGATES TO DECATUR

Wilmette and Winnetka furnished two of the sixty delegates going in the White Robin Special car over the Illinois Central to Decatur on Tuesday to attend the 49th Annual State convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They were Mrs. Isabelle G. Moody of Wilmette, and Mrs. Lewis C. Norton of Winnetka.
