

away with one of the barnyard flock, Mrs. Albert Bister beat the feathered thief to death with a club. The hawk had a wing spread of four feet.

needing it who lives in the city, sewed by the Commons: of a pair of rompers sent to the Lying-in Hospital, and in turn given to a mother for her little girl: of a little slip for a tiny baby in one of the missions in India: and of a pretty apron sent to Judge Bartelme to be used in her court work. Then with all these stories fresh in our minds we went back to work on some more garments, to help out more children, and at the end of the afternoon we closed the machines with a feeling of a day well spent, and I for one considered the day one of the most thrilling I had spent for a long time.

Everybody sewed and visited and when we stopped visiting for a few minutes we sewed to the music of Tscharkowsky's and Rachmaninoff's compositions and we continued to sew as some of Tolstoy's stories were read. Can you imagine working on cotton flannel under more pleasant circumstances?

The tantalizing odor of coffee grew stronger and we "grew hungrier and hungrier." And then luncheon was announced. The many garments which we were working were gathered and we went to the dining room, purchasing for the small sum of 35c our luncheon ticket. And the chicken which I had seen being cut up at 9:30 served to us creamed, with beets, coffee, rolls, jelly and pineapple dessert, all for 35c! Every seat of the 150 was filled.

Hear Story of a Dress

You asked me if we went back to sewing after luncheon. Oh no—there was something else in store for us. Very cleverly in prose and verse we heard the story of a dress, one of the many made by the society, that found its way to a little girl, badly

MRS. NEWCOMER IN GREAT DISCOVERY

Woman's Society Meeting Holds Secret

By MRS. NEWCOMER

Have you ever been invited to attend an all-day meeting of the Women's society of the Congregational church? Then you have a surprise in store for you, if you go. I confess, when I thought of giving up a day in the height of Christmas preparations to attend a Women's society meeting, I accepted with reluctance, for my experience with women's church societies was that they were not worthwhile in proportion to the time and energy expended. But a newcomer to this village makes many surprising discoveries and I made one when I went to Community House Wednesday.

Such a hubbub greeted me as I stepped inside the door! Cries of "Where were you born, where were you born" filled my ears. Forthwith I was tickled with the name of my native state written on a slip of paper. Some thought the cry was "When were you born" and there was a scramble to get past the door, but no one could get through without being labeled.

Chicken on Menu

I was then taken into another room, but on the way I could not help peeping through the open door of the kitchen where several women were busy preparing luncheon, and I noticed that chicken was on the menu! I learned that the women in the kitchen, all members of the society, got there at nine o'clock and prepared luncheon for 150 people, and served it at 12:15 o'clock. And how much do you suppose we paid for luncheon? Wait a few minutes and I will tell you.

The Sewing Circle

The room to which I was led was filled with busy women, industriously sewing on different kinds of garments, for one of the big things the society does is to make hundreds of garments each year for various charitable organizations. The "States" sat together and I was introduced to my state as well as to the others. Each group thought her state was the only one, of course, and the Michiganders claimed much recognition because "we raised Henry Ford."
