Lovely Paintings
Now on Exhibit
in Harris Hall

ART lovers will be interested in knowing that the representative collection of paintings by Chicago artists, known as the Municipal Art Gallery, is now on view in Harris Hall, on the Northwestern university campus, practically at our door. All of our women's clubs have a proprietary interest in these lovely pictures and feel indebted to Mrs. William S. Howell, of Evanston, through whose influence, as a member of the University Guild, the collection has been brought here, and who has been instrumental in its advantageous hanging and lighting. The pictures will be here for several months, and afford an opportunity for the art lovers of the north shore to see a splendid group of paintings, ideally placed.

The Municipal Art Gallery was established in 1902 by the Municipal Art League of Chicago with the purpose of forming a chronological collection of works by artists who are or who have been identified with the art life of Chicago, and of encouraging among local artists the production of works worthy to be hung in a public gallery.
