On Time!

SOMETIMES we have wondered why a buyer of printing doesn't specify as delivery date sometime other than "tomorrow".

That's somewhat exaggerated, of course! But an astonishing proportion of business the printer does is under a "rush" schedule. We do that at the LLOYD HOLLISTER Inc. plant, but we don't like to.

We cannot escape the thought that a customer is buying printing rather than promptness. He wants a neat, workmanlike, attractive looking finished product.

In every way economically possible we like to produce just that--and if you will remember that the more work a printer can turn through his presses, the greater his volume and the greater his profit, you may well know that he, too, is anxious to be "on time".

On that next order of yours, we can assure you promptness, yes, but let your first consideration be a satisfactory final product.
