

A "Western" House for Comfortable Living the Year 'Round

House No. 619 Designed for American Face Brick Association

Check over this house and you will find all the modern conveniences of an up-to-date home, and yet all included in such a way as to make the house an exceptionally economical one to build. Note especially the ingenious way in which the garage and sleeping porch have been made a part of the house.

The porch on this house is the principal external feature. It is so large and so placed that some portion of it will be shady at any hour of the day. Although it extends along two sides of the living room, it does not darken that room, which has a fine group of windows at the uncovered side.

The front part of the porch may be glazed in, if desired, and made into a sun parlor, as French doors connect it with the living room. The open fireplace on the porch will make it a delightful spot on early autumn days.

This house may be placed on a fifty-foot lot with space to spare on one side for the driveway to the garage, which is annexed to the rear of the house from which it is readily heated. The side entrance to the house beneath the stairway landing is convenient for motorists.

Entering through the porch and vestibule, one finds himself in a large hall from which the stairs ascend to a well-lighted landing. On one side is the living room with its fireplace, bookcases, and window seat. On the other side is the dining room with its group of casement windows and a built-in side-board. From the hall one may go to the kitchen by way of a short passage from which opens a convenient lavatory and a second coat closet.

Special attention is called to the arrangement of the kitchen. The sink is under the windows with cabinets on either side, and is but one step from either the range or table. The refrigerator is in the entry near the dining room door.

There are three splendid bedrooms with closets, a large bath, and sleeping porch on the second floor. The house has a full basement with heating plant, fuel bins, laundry, and storage and vegetable rooms.

That was recorded and then he was asked his father's name. His brisk reply was "Louie da plumber." It Pays to advertise!
