They Now Teach Swimming By Radio—Every Morning

You can learn to swim by hanging your clothes on a hickory hook and not going near the water, if you tune in on KYW at 6:30 or at 7 o'clock any morning and take instructions from George Scheuchenflug, swimming director of the Central Y. M. C. A. beginning Monday, April 21.

It will be helpful if you have a piano stool over which to drape yourself, while you learn to plow through the water. After the radio lessons are over, the members of the class will be taken to some real water and given an opportunity to demonstrate the swimming prowess that they have attained, under the direction of the instructor.

Over two thousand people in Chicago and all over the Central States have written in that they are taking these Y. M. C. A. morning exercises via radio. P. A. Leonhardt, physical director, has enough testimonials from fat people made thin and thin people made thick, to make a patent medicine firm jealous.
