

'FOLLIES' ARE DUE HERE SOON

Stupendous Extravaganza Is Booked for Performances in Indian Hill

JOE BRENN, DIRECTOR

Indian Hill Association Sponsors Event

At the regular monthly meeting of the Indian Hill Improvement association, held in the New Trier school hall, Monday evening, December 15, it was unanimously voted that the association put on a combination minstrel musical comedy show similar to that produced with such signal success two years ago.

Those who attended the previous show were apparently well rewarded, judging by the repeated inquiries from residents along the north shore as to when the association contemplated repeating their former success, therefore it is anticipated that this year's performance will be even better attended than the last and will prove to be a form of good entertainment.

Indian Hill Follies

"The Indian Hill Follies" will be produced by the Joe Brenn Production company which handled the last show and, judging by the plans in the making, the new production will be, to use a phrase from the circus people "bigger and better than ever." Further announcements regarding the date of the show will be made later but at this time tentative plans are for its being put on about the third week in February.

Last Monday's meeting was very well attended there being in the neighborhood of 150 members present and after a short business session the members enjoyed the usual social hour of dancing and refreshments.

Students Entertain

During the course of the meeting the members were given a vocal treat furnished by two students of the New Trier High school.

The association was fortunate in being privileged to hear Thomas F. L. Henderson, a dean of the LaSalle Extension university, whose subject was "Success." Mr. Henderson is a very entertaining and convincing speaker and the audience was delighted with his talk.

PLAY AT SCHOOL TELLS TRUE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Those who went to the Christmas play at the North Shore Country Day school yesterday heard some beautiful music and came away with a rich thought about the Christmas spirit.

"The Way" was written and given by the ninth grade. It was the story of many people, a merry-maker, an unbeliever, a mother, a beggar, a rich and selfish merchant, who meet by chance at the forking of the ways because they do not know which road to take. A pilgrim at the deserted wayside shrine, hears their thoughtless and cruel conversation, and, upon being asked the way, replies that he will tell them.

"Not only have ye lost the way to your ancient city, but ye have lost the road of love and joy, for which, as all good folk believe, Christ was born into the world to show us."

The Pilgrim then asks if they will listen first to "an ancient story," for then they "will know truly how to choose the shining way." Held by his compelling personality and deep sincerity, these oddly matched travelers of such varied walks of life stay to "hear with their souls." The sweet old story is then told by this strange pilgrim and to the listeners the shepherds themselves seem to walk past on their way to Bethlehem. Wonderingly these folk speak of the vision they have seen, but the marvel has not ceased. The wise men and at last the Virgin herself, with Joseph, both gazing into a manger from which the Holy Light shines before them.

Love and kindness, reverence and adoration have displaced the cruelty and selfishness of the listeners. In the soft blue light of the old fourteenth century town the little group kneel before the vision, as the pilgrim repeats the prophesy, "For unto us a Child is born; unto us a Son is given...and He shall teach us of His ways and we shall walk in His paths."
