

"What'll I Wear?" Familiar Query of Year's Girl Grads

North shore teachers in the eighth grade rooms have suddenly found themselves forced into the position of spring styles arbiters and the scope of their advisory capacities is including male as well as female "glad-rags."

"Honest, teacher, I've got to make my own dress and you just got to tell me how to do it," pleaded one girl. "Do we have to wear white—and will my black shoes be all right?" questioned another of her school teacher. "No, wear anything you want," teacher explained. "I'm much more interested in what you have in your head than what you are going to wear, anyway."

A lad who had been wearing a worried look for days brightened at the words.

"Then overalls will be all right?" he asked.

"If you think you want to wear them," replied teacher without enthusiasm, however.

And it's all because it's springtime, and new clothes are needed, and graduation days are just in the offing.

But instead of the snowy white graduation dresses of other years, the teachers predict that pastel shades will predominate, with colors varying greatly. The youthful style connoisseurs are advised to get swisses, organ-dies and voiles. A surprising number have already purchased their dresses and inquiry indicates that these are of the kind which can be used later for other occasions.

Boys are in a quandary.

"Will I get those first long pants this time, or will it be another pair of knee-breeches? Gosh, I'd like to have a real pair of white ducks—wouldn't Mary's eyes pop out, though?"
