John G. Shedd
Famous Chicago Merchant,
Financier and Philanthropist

DURING recent years I have noted a cleaner tone and a more orderly, reliable presentation of news in many of the prominent papers of the country, noticeably in the Herald and Examiner.

I am glad to compliment the Herald and Examiner for many things, particularly the following:

- The compactness of its reports.
- The support of the Chicago Plan Commission's activities.
- Loyalty to the Spirit of Chicago, the Great Central Market.
- Attitude of fairness in presentation of the news.
- Clear, readable typography.
- Many of its editorial features such as Hinman's and Forbes' presentation of world finance.
- * * *
- And particularly, its presentation of business news in general.

I consider it, in its widest sense, a popular newspaper, appealing to all classes of people. That it does so is amply shown by its field of special features."
