Fashions in paint, as in all things, change and often, like the time tables, are subject to change without notice. But they generally break out again, like epidemics, or recur in cycles.

This use of paint is apparently as old as the human race. In fact, Darwin was right in supposing that the race only became human when it first began to paint, according to modern scientific research. The reverse "english" is likewise true that "painted ladies" often make monkeys of men.

Girls and women who paint can, however, silence the male who objects by pointing out that Man painted first, it probably being several centuries before the weaker cave female was per-

Demand

IN the early days of the telephone, when the 16-mile circuit from Boston to Salem was the longest in existence, a woman visited the Boston exchange and asked for a connection to Chicago so she could talk with her son.

The need for voicing thought to far-away places began with the nation's expanding activities. Long before the telephone art permitted it, long distance service was demanded. A national service was, from the beginning, the beacon of the telephone's founders, and the inspiration of the scientists and engineers whose achievements gradually overcame the obstacles to the transmission of human speech.

These conquered, national expansion has more and more been made possible, and the uncertainties of separation have diminished. Today any community in America can talk with any other so promptly and satisfactorily that men have difficulty in imagining a time when universal service was an ideal yet to be reached.
