

PURPLE TRAIN FOR BIG YEAR

South Dakota Is First Test for N. U. Gridders

Two inter-sectional grid games are on the Northwestern university football schedule this fall which, in several aspects, is one of the stiffest lists of games faced by a Purple eleven in years.

The two contests, which will bring teams from different sections of the country, are those with the University of South Dakota, October 3, and Tulane university, October 24. The South Dakota game opens the fall schedule and is to be played at Northwestern field in Evanston. The Purple will journey to Stagg field on the Midway for the Tulane game since the home stands will not handle the large crowds which will attend the contest.

Tulane will send a strong team northward for the Northwestern engagement. The lads from New Orleans have an enviable reputation in southern football circles and should provide the Purple with plenty of opposition.

Coach Thistlethwaite planned to push his men hard from the start of practice this week in order to get them in condition for the opening game. Last season the gridders from the Northwest gave the Purple a hard fight for the season's opener and, with many veterans back again this fall, the game should be closely contested throughout.

Meet Carleton Eleven

The week following the Dakota engagement will see the Carleton college eleven on Northwestern field for a test of conference football. The Minnesota gridders have long been one of the leaders among the smaller institutions of the Northwest and for this reason Coach Thistlethwaite added them to the Purple schedule for an early season game.

Following the Carleton game the Purple will plunge into the conference season by taking on the Chicago Maroons, last season's Big Ten champions. The game between the two institutions for the Chicago championship has always been one of intense rivalry. Last year the Maroons won from the Purple by a 3 to 0 score on a drop kick in the closing minutes of play.

On the next Saturday, October 24, another trip will be made to Stagg field, this time to take on Tulane.

Michigan Here

Indiana will provide the homecoming entertainment for the Purple on October 3 at Northwestern field. The following Saturday, November 7, will see Thistlethwaite and his men back in Chicago, this time to meet Michigan on Soldiers' field, at Grant Park. Another out-of-town trip will be made on November 14, when the Purple hop down to Lafayette to meet Purdue university. For the last two years Purdue has won from the Purple in their annual engagement and this fall will see the two rivals again battling for supremacy.

The final game of the year will be played at South Bend against Coach Knute Rockne's Notre Dame eleven. Last season the Purple gave the famous Notre Dame team its hardest game of the season, holding the four horsemen to a 13 to 6 score.

New Trier Starts Grid Play Against Lake View

Walter Aschenbach, new football coach at New Trier high school, took charge of the squad this week and has been holding strenuous practice every day. The first game of the season will be played this Saturday afternoon on the New Trier field when Lake View high school of Chicago will do battle with the local eleven. Lake View had a strong team last year and is expected to put up a stiff fight Saturday, but Coach Aschenbach is hopeful of victory.
