

SUGGESTS PLANS FOR CENTENNIAL PROGRAM

ning, organizing and administration of the Centennial Exhibition of 1937.

"This improvement of the city would include both public and private effort. Both would be quickened and strengthened by the fact that at a fixed date, the city of Chicago would be on exhibit before the world in an unusual way. The Chicago Centennial Commission would not interfere in any way with the orderly development of the city. Its duty would be to promote a spirit of cooperative effort and would contribute to public welfare and civic progress.

Plans for public improvement on a vast scale, already adopted and now being made, will be completed before that date. Others, badly needed and long considered, will be expedited by the added incentive which this movement will give to action toward a fixed goal. These improvements in themselves would give a remarkable setting to the efforts of the city during this period.

Cites Great Projects

"These improvements, actually in progress or anticipated, include new Railroad terminals, electrification of railways, improvement of municipal transportation system including subways, Water street improvement, extension and widening west side avenues, as well as other features of the Chicago City Plan, completion of the Forest Preserve district, and many others of great importance as well as the probable adoption of the plan for new Waterways from Lake to Gulf and from Lake to Ocean.

"Other activities of great importance will be quickened to keep pace. These include the improvement of health, education, recreation, citizenship, welfare and various other phases of city life which requires constant vigilance and cooperative effort. The emphasis would be to make the existing organizations that foster the best in the city's life more effective rather than to add new ones or to impose additional restrictions.

"The production of the Centennial Exhibition will require at least ten years of hard work on the part of the citizens of Chicago. Experience has shown that this is sufficient time, but not too much in view of the magnitude of the undertaking. The Worlds Fair in Chicago still remains an inspiring example of what a city can do along these lines. The Chicago Centennial should be in keeping with the progress of the city and the world, since the famous Worlds Fair Exhibition.

Utilize Lake Front

"The Lake Front offers a natural location where improvements are completed for this exhibition. It lends itself to such a purpose in a way that is incomparably finer than any other location in the world. There can be made ready, by the time this Exhibition is completed, a Lake Front park extending the entire length of the city of sufficient size to properly house the Centennial buildings both permanent and temporary with space to handle the immense crowds that will come to the city.

Now I am up against it. I found so much fault with our meals lately that Mrs. Happy has put it up to me to plan our Christmas dinner for the family reunion.

That's a good joke on you, Happy. Better not be so critical. But, PETERS MARKET will solve the big problem for you as they will have a special supply of Christmas Prize Beef, Fancy Turkeys, Ducks and Chickens. Anything you select there will be of the finest quality.
