Northwestern University Establishes Psychological Branch to Aid Children and Adults of North Shore

Ready response has met the proposal of the psychological department of Northwestern university to aid the north shore district through the mental hygiene clinic recently organized at the school. The work is under the supervision of Prof. A. R. Gilliland and John J. B. Morgan.

"The purpose of the clinic is to give help to anyone who has any mental difficulty," said Prof. Gilliland. "It is not limited to children, although this is one great field of work, but will serve all persons who come for help. There is no red tape and the service is free.

"The object is to treat minor mental disturbances before they lead to something serious. People who become mentally unbalanced start with some mild disturbance. If this disturbance is corrected in time the later and more serious trouble is averted. Difficult conduct problems in children always start with something trivial, but these, if handled incorrectly, may lead to pernicious, lawless acts."

In order to meet the medical needs of the clinic, Dr. Herman Adler, director of the Institute for Juvenile Research of Chicago, has agreed to furnish a psychiatrist. The Central Association of Evanston Charities is co-operating on the social side.

Individuals needing examination have been sent to the clinic by the supertendent of the Evanston schools, by the Evanston police department and by various other social agencies.

The university professors hope to make the clinic an educational tool for training students who may later go into medicine, social or any other vocation where a better understanding of human nature is desirable.

AUBURN WHEELBASE

There is no substitute for wheelbase. Comfort is a mathematical impossibility if wheelbase is too short. The Auburn 8 has 129 inches. That is one reason "small" cars cannot compare with Auburn road-ease and luxury. In addition Auburn offers larger motors, stronger frames, finer bodies and greater and better value in every way. Drive it and compare it. If it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.
