Susan Anne Says:

Polishing furniture is first a matter of cleaning the surface thoroughly with light suds carefully wiped off after the dust and dirt has all been removed. But most of all one must have a good reliable furniture polish, something that will give the desired sheen and also prove lasting without checking the varnish. That is what you will like about the furniture polishes we sell, which only one of the many housekeeping aids you can get at our store.

It is no trouble at all to give the refrigerator a lovely coat of perfectly mirror-like white enamel, or to go over any of the furniture or beds, or woodwork with a coat of enamel or stain or varnish—if you get the right kind of enamel or stain or varnish, and the brush best suited to the work. It is more fun than fancy work and a delight when you are through. They told me just what to get and how to get the best results.
