

"God and Idols,"
Next Subject in
Tuesday Lectures
 By OBSERVER

The marvelous literary beauty of the later chapters of Isaiah would be sufficient reason for their study if no other was named. Do you recall the beauty of Is. 40:1-11? The Rev. J. A. Richards spoke of that portion Tuesday morning, February 23, and gave a most informing story of how the chapters of 40 to 66 of Isaiah are credited by scholars to an unknown author called, for convenience, the "Second Isaiah."

A very striking feature of the talk was the suggestion as to what develops a nation's literature. Many of the psalms, lamentations, some of the lesser or minor prophets, Ezekiah's great book and all historical books compiled and known as the Hexateuch were written at this time. Yet this was the period of exile, of suffering, of discouragement.

Never have the beautiful words "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people—speak ye comfortably," or "whisper woingly to Jerusalem" meant so much as when read at the close of the morning lecture. Do not miss the second lecture to be given Tuesday morning, March 2, at 10 o'clock, on "God and Idols." Isaiah 40:12-31 and Isaiah 44:9-20. Neighborhood room, Community House.

Mrs. J. Waller of 674 Prospect avenue will be hostess at a luncheon and bridge given for the alumnae of Bradford academy Tuesday, March 2.

Mrs. Arthur J. Schultz of 979 Cherry street entertained Monday afternoon at tea in honor of her mother, Mrs. James P. McMahan of Evanston.

Give Symphony Concert
Over Radio Next Week

Symphony concerts are so infrequently broadcast that much interest should attach to the concert to be given by the Columbia School Symphony orchestra under the direction of Ludwig Becker in Orchestra hall, Chicago, Wednesday evening, March 3. This will be broadcast from station WMAQ operated by the Chicago Daily News. The orchestra will play an overture by Massenet; the "New World Symphony," by Dvorak, and will close the program with an Egyptian ballet by Luigini. There will be two piano concertos, a violin concerto, a baritone solo and a soprano solo. This is the school that for so many years has had a branch in Winnetka in charge of Miss Kathleen Air who was recently elected a member of its board of directors.

Dr. and Mrs. George F. Suker, 1028 Starr road, left Thursday, February 13, with a party of friends, for New York whence they sailed Monday for a cruise to the West Indies. They will be away several weeks.

Wash Day Is Play Day with an Electric Washer
$165

An electric washer takes all the drudge out of wash day. It takes less time to do the family wash, the results are excellent, and it conserves the strength of the housewife. Let us demonstrate to you the sterling features of Conlon Electric Washer.
