Subdivide Parts of Big Glen Oak Acres Properties

G. H. Jacobsen is subdividing the first and second additions to Glen Oak Acres. The two additions comprise about 80 acres and front on Lake avenue and Wagner road.

Glen Oak Acres, as the name implies, comprises acre tracts, which are wooded and highly restricted. The two new additions will comprise fifty foot lots, which will enable people of moderate means to acquire home sites in this rapidly growing section. There will also be restrictions in regard to the improvements to be made in these additions, and in which the streets will be made to conform to the streets in Glen Oak Acres, and into which they will open. The tract comprising the new additions is not wooded, but four fine trees will be planted on each lot. The development of the new tract is being made by Mr. Jacobsen for various syndicate owners. A. C. Lueder, Postmaster of Chicago, represents one syndicate. J. H. Schaefer and company, the real estate firm at 831 Ridge avenue, Wilmette, and George E. White, of the firm of Klinge and White, the Ridge avenue, merchants, have another. The Schaefer company is also interested in still another of the syndicates.

EVANSTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

More Than an Establishment—

A North Shore Institution

More than just a building, machines, and men, Cadillac Evanston Service is a friendly, vital aid to Cadillac owners. It is an institution to which Cadillac owners can turn with complete confidence that their needs will be met in as perfect a manner as is humanly possible.

Cadillac has never believed that owners should be forced to find service "anywhere and everywhere." In Evanston, as in five Chicago communities, it has established a complete service organization; equipped it with time-saving tools; manned it with a courteous trained personnel of mechanics. Here at Standardized Charges, an exceptional quality of service is rendered.

The obligation to satisfy Cadillac owners is never forgotten by Cadillac. The Evanston Service institution is evidence of this.
