Indian Cavalry Troop Enter Chicago Pageant

Troop "C," 114th Cavalry, the only Indian cavalry troop in the United States Army, composed of Indians from twenty-nine different tribes coming from twenty states in the Union will visit Chicago this summer to appear in the production "The Birth of Chicago" at Soldiers Field, July 1 to 7, presented under the auspices of the Loyal Order of Moose, during their International convention here that week.

Representatives of rival tribes, bitter enemies in the past, their differences a subject of strife for centuries, have buried the hatchet, smoked the peace-pipe and now all belong to the same tribe, Troop "C."

The committee in charge of "The Birth of Chicago" headed by Mayor William E. Dever, have been negotiating with Gov. Ben F. Paulen of Kansas, for the use of the troops in this production which was officially endorsed by the Mayor as Chicago's own tribute to our nation on its 150th birthday. This week Governor Paulen sent word that Chicago is to have an opportunity to witness the exhibition of this crack unit from Haskell Institute which have won world-wide fame as the best mounted military troop existing.

The Unit is made up of one-hundred full-blood Indians, representing the Piate, Navajo, Ute, Bannock, Klamath, Sioux, Apache, Creek and many other tribes descendants of the painted warriors who so furiously fought the ingress of the soldiers fighting under the flag which they now serve.

Several north shore men are on the "Birth of Chicago" pageant committee.
