Hiawatha Woods Is Newest Marvel of Acre Home-Sites

An Indian Tree, "monument to the unknown American" who bent the white oak sapling there some scores of years ago, marks the way from just within a stately portal to one of the finest home-site developments on the north shore, termed by its owners, Hiawatha Woods, and comprising some of the most desirable acreage property on the upper north shore.

Reference is to the newest development—sixty acres of a tract of 125 acres of virgin timberland situated west of Deerfield near the Vernon Ridge Country club and extending northerly from Deerfield road to old Hill road.

Beautiful winding roads stretch between naturally landscaped estates averaging more than an acre and a half in size. Here the general scheme of development contemplates the fulfillment of the exclusive estates idea, with acres made available to the man of moderate income but who is seeking a permanent home in the country, according to Waite and Morrow, who have the business of marketing the properties in hand.

Hiawatha Woods are within seven minutes of direct Chicago transportation, it is explained, and within forty-five minutes of the Loop. Forty-eight wooded home-sites are to be seen on the paved by-ways stretching beyond the old Indian tree that stands just within the portals of Hiawatha Woods.
