

Uncle Sam to Finance Interstate Road System

Construction work on the national system of interstate and transcontinental highways is now financed for another three years as the result of the recognition by Congress of the Federal Government's obligation to support financially these recognized means of communication and transportation, the Chicago Motor club announced this week.

Passage of the Dowell bill, authorizing appropriations of $165,000,000 for Federal aid highways for the two year period ending June 30, 1929, definitely assures the middle west the financial assistance necessary to permit the continuation of the program of highway construction laid out. Money from previous appropriations is now available for use of the states during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927.

"The overwhelming support given the Dowell bill when it passed the Senate last week with only six opposing votes, definitely establishes the Federal aid principle in highway construction and is practical assurance that when the funds now appropriated are exhausted, Congress will continue appropriations until the Federal aid highway system is completed," according to a statement issued yesterday by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

The Dowell bill authorizes appropriations of $75,000,000 annually for Federal aid highways for each of the fiscal years, 1928 and 1929, and also provides appropriations of $7,500,000 annually for each of these two years for national forest roads and trails.
