

Northwestern's New Stadium Will Be Ready in Time

Northwestern university's big new stadium will be ready for the opening of the fall football season. This announcement, that gladdened the hearts of Purple gridiron fans, came this week from Director of Athletics Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson, after the usual weekly conference with construction officials.

Twenty-five thousand seats are assured for the inaugural contest with South Dakota on October 2, with the seating capacity slated to increase until the temporary maximum of 55,000 is reached for the formal dedication contest, that with the University of Chicago on November 13. When conditions require, a third deck will be added and approximately 80,000 spectators will be provided for.

The contractors daily report that work is progressing satisfactorily. The strike of iron construction workers a few weeks ago, that slowed up all building work in the Chicago area, halted labor for ten days, but already this time has been made up and this week the work was ahead of schedule.

The 1926 schedule shows Northwestern has six of its eight games at the new stadium. Journeys to Indiana and Iowa constitute the only out-of-town clashes on the card, on which five Big Ten conference games are billed. The complete schedule follows: October 2, South Dakota at Evanston; October 9, Carleton at Evanston; October 16, Indiana at Evanston; October 23, Notre Dame at Evanston; October 30, Indiana at Bloomington; November 6, Purdue at Evanston; November 13, Chicago at Evanston; November 20, Iowa at Iowa City.

CAR WASHING

Mud and grease have never been known to do any good to the finish of a car. Have your car washed at regular intervals. The paint will last much longer and you in turn will feel more comfortable about driving; around town especially.

STORAGE

Plenty of available space for storage. If you are going away for the summer, put your car in our garage. It's the safest thing to do.
