

Aristotle was right!

Happiness cannot be bought. It is the measure of contentment. Let us insure your contentment by measuring your coal bin and filling it with the fuel best suited to your particular heating plant. The number of those who have thus provided for their winter heat and cheer is rapidly increasing.

Let us have your name today, then you may rest content that you will be confronted with no tiresome heating troubles when the cold weather is actually here.

We offer you personal attention for this problem. Can you afford to pass this by?
