S. J. Duncan-Clark to Lecture Before Y. W. C. A. Classes

Class time again—and with it the enrolling for the various fascinating subjects offered by the Y. W. C. A. at its Central branch center in the heart of Chicago's Loop. This new term marks the eighth year that courses have been conducted at 59 E. Monroe street for the girls and women of Chicago and suburbs.

In starting off the term Monday, September 13, what subjects are offered and are they popular? At this one center last year there were over 2,000 registrations in the department of general education. As for the courses, they are provided upon the request of past pupils and upon the suggestions of new-comers. Since there are over fifty subjects on the program, the pupils find not only one line to pursue, but several and at hours which are well adapted to their daily calendars.

"The girls study just about everything," says Mrs. Louis E. Kuester, who is directing the enrollment. "They learn how to make a dress at a remarkable saving on their budget; or how to paint a screen for a Christmas gift; how to speak and write good plain English; how to introduce a friend; how to put a motion; how to sing and how to play."

"The department of education in the Y. W. C. A. all over the country has gone through such a long process of development that the system is easily executed in methods adaptable to the girls, who have time after office hours for evening study. And there are of course daytime classes for those who find those hours more suitable. Several new and interesting features will be offered," says the director. "The department has been fortunate in securing S. J. Duncan-Clark of Wilmette for a series of lectures on "The Story of the New Testament and the Story in the New Testament." Classes in parliamentary law and social economy will soon be underway and a daytime, as well as nighttime English class."

A "Mixer" on Friday evening, September 10, at 8 o'clock introduces the new term. Classes begin September 13, and special attention is called to the first week instruction to which visitors are invited free. This gives the person who is contemplating some form of advancement this winter to observe and to determine which she wishes to join.
