

Gunn Musical Art School Locates on North Shore

The Glenn Dillard Gunn School of Musical Arts of Chicago is opening a branch at Winnetka October 1, 1926.

"It is indeed a privilege to have this organization on the north shore," its friends assert, "for no other has had such extensive growth, and since its inception the Gunn school has successfully opened branches in many cities."

"The outstanding characteristic of the school in all its branches is its personnel which consists of teachers of recognized merits and abilities," it is further stated. "Furthermore public appearances of its students with well known orchestras are part of the curriculum and periodic examinations by Mr. Gunn, are given at stated intervals."

Mr. Gunn himself takes an active interest in the work done in the various departments, it is explained. Mrs. Carrie S. Roberts, who has been chosen organizer and manager-teacher of the Winnetka branch, has for many years been a teacher and pianist in Chicago. She has appeared with members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in ensemble as well as solo.

Instruction will be given in the various departments of music and dramatic art and applications for registration are to be addressed to Mrs. Roberts 760 Prospect avenue or directly to the Gunn school at 421 S. Wabash avenue, Chicago, it is announced.
