

North Shore Has Fastest Electric Train in all U. S.

The fastest electric train in the United States is the Metropolitan Limited, operated by the North Shore line daily from Milwaukee to Chicago, according to a survey made by Electric Traction.

This train leaves Milwaukee Terminal, Sixth and Sycamore streets, at 3:55 p. m., and arrives at Randolph and Wells street station in the Chicago Loop at 5:53 p. m., standard time, covering the distance of approximately eighty-five miles in one hour and fifty-eight minutes and making three stops en route.

Several other North Shore line limited trains make almost as good time between Milwaukee and Chicago. The Northland Limited, northbound, and the Interstate and Illinois Limiteds, southbound, make the run in exactly two hours. The Badger Limited, southbound, is scheduled at two hours and one minute, while three other limiteds cover the distance in two hours and two minutes.

The North Shore line operates twenty limited dining and parlor-observation car trains daily between Chicago and Milwaukee. All of these trains bear special names. A total of eighteen limiteds are operated northbound and nineteen southbound daily between Chicago and Milwaukee over the new Skokie Valley route.
