Country Day Fair Has Everything One Could Desire

Perhaps you were among the many who did not get to attend the Vacation Fair at the North Shore Country Day school, Friday of last week.

If so, just read the following account of the Fair, written by one of the North Shore Country Day school pupils, as an English theme, and you'll know what a great time you missed.

"The Vacation Fair at the North Shore Country Day school, Friday, the first of October, went off with a bang of enthusiasm and good work. Everywhere was bustle and excitement, bright colors, typical of a fair, and the squealing and squawking of guinea pigs, birds, dogs, cats, etc.

"From the travel booth to the pets and back to the Camp booth we walked, our eyes fairly popping out of our heads at all the interesting and comical things we saw.

"At the flower and vegetable booth there were wonderful articles grown by the children of the school, some in odd shapes and others much too immense to be real. The flowers were lovely in every different color and size imaginable.

"The Nature booth had crawling, ugly bugs, that I suppose were really wonderful specimens, but my tastes don't run to bugs. The butterflies were lovely, though, and I do like butterflies.

"We were hungry and tired and so we went up on the stage to a quaint Dutch Kitchen, run by the Tenth grade girls. We had ice cream and cake, as we sat and watched the merrymaking at the Fair.

"Somebody said we ought to go on The Trip to the Moon, so we did go and we were good sports about it too; for it was scary and dark. Then we had our pictures taken and they were as good as pictures of us could be.

"We then filled our pockets with candy and popcorn, as our stomachs sadly needed rest from the ice cream.

"After looking at our favorite booths again we went home, deciding it was the best Fair we had ever been to. And if you want a good time, come next year to the Fair."

It Is Our Constant Aim to do.... Three Things

First:

It is always in our minds when buying household utilities to get the best consistent with a moderate price. We have found that by careful investigation we can frequently get something better, for the same price as something not quite so good. We demand high quality. We give high quality.

Second:

We mark our goods as low as they can be sold by anybody without sacrificing a fair profit. We do not try to undersell, but we always aim to cut our prices down to a just minimum.

Third:

We will let no one give better service than we do. Always we are adopting plans to improve our store and delivery service. Our salesmen must be courteous and quick to wait upon anyone who enters our store or makes a call on the telephone. We insist that our service shall be 100 percent satisfactory to our customers.
