Wilhjalmur Stefansson to Speak of Explorations Before Wilmette Sunday Evening Club October 31

Wilhjalmur Stefansson, scientist and explorer, will deliver an illustrated lecture at the Wilmette Sunday Evening club, Sunday, October 31. Mr. Stefansson presents a character of rare accomplishments. He is in turn a man of letters, an author, and a lecturer.

Born of Icelandic parents in Manitoba, Canada, he came to the United States as a child and was brought up on the prairies of North Dakota. In 1903 he received from the University of Iowa the degree of A. B., after which he went to Harvard for post-graduate work. There he held a scholarship for one year and a fellowship for two years and during the last of these years he was a member of the teaching staff of the Department of Anthropology at Harvard.

In 1906 he began his explorations and in the years that followed spent ten winters and thirteen summers in the arctic regions. In this time he discovered four islands, now known as Brock, Borden, Laugheed, and Meighen, and established the principle of "living off of the land." On his last expedition he carried this still farther and proved that it could be applied to ice as well. Stefansson is a brilliant and successful writer and is the author of four books and a great many magazine articles. He is also a fascinating and instructive lecturer.

"Glad to Meet You": Queen to Milan Lusk

As Queen Marie of Roumania, escorted by diplomats, social lions, and detectives, arrived at a reception in New York last week, she stopped her procession and extended her royal hand to Milan Lusk, who is in New York filling an engagement.

"Oh, how do you do! I am so glad to see you," the queen exclaimed. "Mr. Lusk,"—to the others—"played for me twice in my house." Mr. Lusk bowed and kissed her extended hand in true courtier style. Princess Iliana and Prince Nicholas recognized Mr. Lusk and greetings were exchanged. Then the procession moved on to the main room where the reception, given for the queen by Ira Nelson Morris, the Swedish minister, was being held.

Mr. Lusk will return to his home in Wilmette Sunday.

Make Your Kitchen — a Joy Spot—Ventilate it

Cleanliness in the home should begin in the kitchen—here is the source of greasy fumes and cooking odors which float through the house and linger for hours. Nowadays the modern kitchen is ventilated with an

ILGAIR

The ILGAIR is a compact, quiet-running direct connected exhaust fan with a fully enclosed, self-cooled motor that can be easily installed in your window sash or wall opening. A turn of the switch affords a constant circulation of pure, invigorating air and all objectionable cooking odors, fumes and greasy atmosphere are quickly removed.

It's a joy to work in a kitchen that is ventilated with an ILGAIR. Many homes on the North Shore have installed it.

The cost is very nominal $35 and up—and can be arranged on easy monthly payments.

See it in our store or ask to have a salesman call. No obligations.
