N. U. Chicago Seats Are Sold Out Three Weeks Ahead of Game

Although the Northwestern-Chicago football game is still more than two weeks distant, every seat for the contest has already been sold, it was announced this week by Edward B. Davidson, ticket manager. All orders for tickets now being received will be returned, since the last ticket was sold early this week.

The stands for the Chicago game, which is to be played November 13, will seat 45,000 spectators. It is expected to have the second deck of the west stands completed by that time. This will add 4,500 seats to the capacity of the stadium.

Followers of the Purple who were unable to obtain tickets for the Chicago game still have an opportunity of seeing their favorites in action when Purdue comes here a week from Saturday for the home-coming engagement. Plenty of seats are still available for this contest but the sale is brisk and a sell-out is anticipated.

Many fans will follow the team to Indiana this Saturday on the special train over the Monon which will leave early Saturday morning. Tickets for the game may be obtained at the University ticket office at 1422 Central street and at the Hub clothing store in the Orrington hotel. Tickets for the special train may also be obtained at these places.

Mme. Molter Wins Plaudits of Music Critics

Isabel Richardson Molter of Wilmette, and her husband and accompanist, Harold Molter, have just returned from New York where Mrs. Molter appeared in song recital at Aeolian hall, before a large and enthusiastic audience. She was acclaimed by the New York press.

The veteran dean of critics, W. J. Henderson, wrote as follows in the New York Sun: "Gifted with unusual instinct for interpretation and style, Mme. Molter sang with much facility and taste a well chosen program, and gave with admirable command of dignified expression the great Abscheulicher air from the Beethoven Fidelio, an opera to be revived at the Metropolitan in January. Mme. Molter's voice is of broad range and she can soar very high with constant security of pitch."

Mr. and Mrs. Molter also were guests at the opening meeting of The Washington Heights Musical club, where she sang the aria from "Fidelio" and a group of Edward MacDowell's songs.

Mrs. Cleon Larson (Cornelia Keith) stopped for a few days in Kenilworth last week on her way to settle her apartment at 220 Moss avenue, Peoria, Ill.
