Jane Addams Speaks

was quoted, "There are many causes of quarrels, but only one cause of war, namely, that there is no other machinery with which to settle difficulties."

Turning to Geneva and the League of Nations, Miss Addams said that while nobody pretended that the league was a perfect organization, certain things were resulting from it. International thinking was more common. Geneva has become the meeting place of innumerable international schools and associations. It also affords a natural meeting place for those in power. At one time fourteen prime ministers were there.

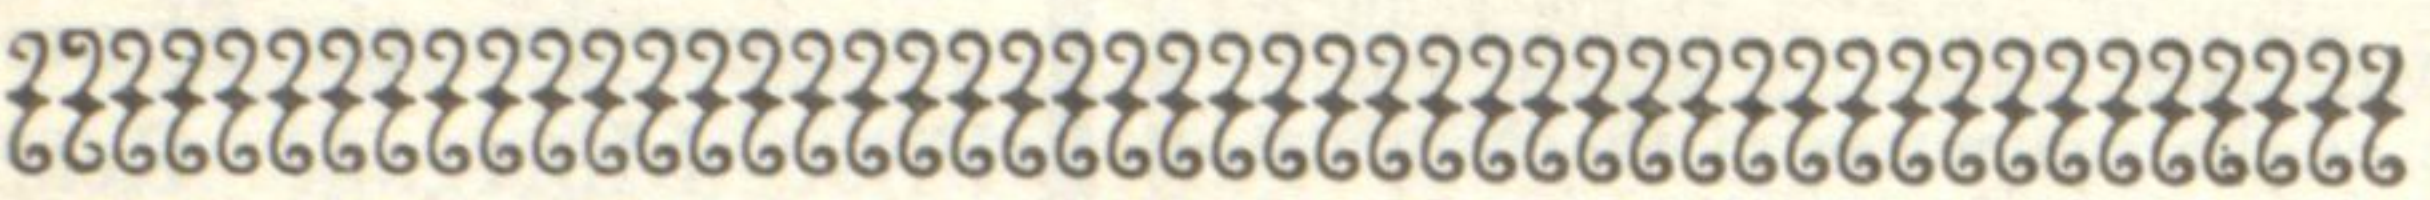

Miss Addams felt that the much criticized mandate system did in a measure protect the weaker nations. While the league could not depose a mandatory power, it did demand periodic reports and resultant publicity was beneficial. The small nations have a chance to express themselves and their representatives are often the most outstanding, as witness Nansen and Benes.

Miss Addams described the tense scene at the reception of Germany. She spoke of the conflicting viewpoints in regard to the United States and the World Court. The Court is a tender plant and cannot afford to show favoritism. There is a feeling that the United States is demanding special privileges. Miss Addams felt that the United States was equally sincere in denying any such intention.

In closing, Miss Addams disclaimed any pleading for the League of Nations. Whether the United States enters it or not is now "up to" the individual. It is much more difficult to enter by referendum than by representatives as did the other nations. The fact remains however, that the league is growing; is finding means of adjustment without the United States.

There was a danger that the United States might lose step with the rest of the world. The audience listened as Miss Addams' audiences always do, completely under the spell of her magnetism and quiet power.

After the meeting was adjourned a social hour followed. The hostesses were, Mrs. C. Anderson Aldrich, Mrs. I. B. Connor, Mrs. James P. Gillies, Mrs. John Hansel, Jr., Mrs. Samuel Smart and Mrs. Heber Smith.

Where charming home atmosphere is an object

DISCRIMINATING people have commented on the degree to which The John Evans reflects the true home atmosphere of Evanston. It is true that this was a major object in its design. Not just a new, well located and convenient apartment was sought. These things provided a groundwork—they are there, of course. But added to them is a new idea—an apartment designed and built as you would build your own home.

You'll find it in the convenient arrangement of the spacious rooms. You'll appreciate it when the sunlight streams in across a quarter acre of garden. In the kitchen with its incinerator, mechanical refrigeration, and spotless cabinets, in tiled baths with overhead showers, in ample closets, in fixtures quietly beautiful, you'll sense this attention to the vital things of home.

And in all four, five, and six room apartments there's a final touch in the real wood burning fireplaces.

If you care about these things come and inspect The John Evans. You'll find it on the quiet edge of activity, in Evanston.
